Petain Yields, Laval to Rejoin French Cabinet

Vichy, Feb. 3.—Pierre Laval probably will be back in Vichy tomorrow, coming from Paris in company with Admiral Jean Darlan, representing Marshal Petain.

Laval comes back under German auspices in order to be readmitted to the cabinet, although in what capacity is not yet known. The government in Vichy is likely to be reorganized almost completely and there is every indication that Pierre-Etienne Flandin, who succeeded to the portfolio of foreign affairs after Laval's fall from office, will be eliminated. Moreover ministerial functions are likely to be concentrated in three or four persons. It is manifest that Laval's return has been imposed by Germany and there is reason to believe that Marshal Petain has accepted the situation as the lesser of two evils in order to preserve the empire, to avoid even the semblance of warlike action against Britain and to prevent shattering all hope of achieving national unity.

Fleet Will Defend Empire

With regard to the first two points Admiral Darlan as commander in chief of the navy, before leaving for Paris early this morning, authorized the publication of a statement which may be summarized thus: France's fleet is and will remain French and it will defend itself and the French Empire against all comers.

With regard to the latter there was ground for supposing, in view of the increasing virulence of the Paris press—under German control—against the Vichy government, that the formation of a rival to the marshal's "rassemblement national" heralded the constitution of a rival government in the occupied zone.

It would appear that the terms of this problem were: Either measures of coercion or the return of Laval. It is understood that coercion was not defined specifically, but evidently it could include further occupation of French territory or the seizure of bases of operations in Tunisia—in brief, measures which not only would have facilitated the Axis powers in their prosecution of the war but which might well have drawn France into the conflict.

Petain May Explain

It is said that Marshal Petain will seize an early opportunity to broadcast to the nation to explain the situation.

Laval's return to the government probably will coincide with a general reconstruction of the cabinet, which will become a triumvirate or a quadumvirate. It was Laval's own suggestion, it was said, in order that there might be no more "indiscretions" regarding negotia-

St. Elizabeths Building Razed In 4-Alarm Fire

A four-alarm fire early today razed the Red Cross recreational building on the grounds of St. Elizabeths Hospital and spread to the roof of nearby Hitchcock Hall building which houses a theater.

None of the mental institution's 6,500 patients occupied the two burned structures, but firemen aided in transferring 160 patients in the Home Building, adjacent to Hitchcock Hall, to safer quarters in the relief building.

Ward Supervisor D. W. Johnson said that despite their proximity to the blaze, the patients maintained order.

The first alarm was sounded at 12:29 a. m. Three more were immediately turned in, bringing 35 pieces of fire apparatus to the scene.

A strong wind whipped the flames high into the sky, attracting motorists from all over southeast Washington, so that Nichols Avenue, which cuts through the hospital grounds, was so jammed with autos that fire engines had difficulty getting through.

Italians Flee British Trap At Barentu

Fascists Retreating Hastily Toward Asmara and Gondar

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Feb. 3.—As British forces, closing in, threatened to cut off their retreat, the Italians defending Barentu in Eritrea yesterday evacuated the town.

They slipped out along the almost impassable mountain trail leading to the southeast toward Adi Ugri on the north-south Asmara Road. Despite the difficulties of movement over this route the British immediately set out in pursuit.

Meanwhile other Italians continued their retreats toward Keren from Agordat, along the Metemma-Gondar Road in central Abyssinia, and from several points on the Kenya frontier.

Although heavy fighting had been going on for several days previous to the evacuation of Barentu, the Italians withdrew before being actually driven out, apparently relying on a short head-start and the rough mountain country to escape from the pursuing British.

Along the main road to Asmara British mechanized troops, chiefly armored cars and trucks, have gotten near Keren, 40 miles east of Agordat and 50 miles west of Asmara.

The Italian retreat toward Gondar has increased in speed. The fleeing forces have been forced to abandon or destroy their materials and stores of all kinds. It would appear unlikely as a consequence that a strong stand will be attempted before Gondar is reached.

Should Gondar fall the Italians will lose the nerve center of their entire central African region.

British patrols continued to penetrate deeper into Italian Somaliland.

The main British forces are proceeding slowly in the Derna area of Libya. Their exact position is being carefully guarded.

Flames destroyed at least seven Italian warplanes early today during a Royal Air Force raid on Tripoli's airdrome at Castel Benito. Several tons of high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped as wave upon wave of raiders blasted the hangars and buildings, setting many of them afire.

This is the third heavy raid that has been announced on this airport, which is becoming increasingly important as fields in Cyrenaica are captured or destroyed, or made difficult to use by constant bombings and strafings.

154 Britons Lost On Destroyer

London, Feb. 3 (AP).—The admiralty announced tonight that 149 of the crew of the destroyer Acheron were missing, five were known to have been killed and 15 wounded when the craft was sunk December 26.

British naval casualties to date, the admiralty said, are 3,419 killed, 2,665 wounded, 5,699 missing, 79 dead from illness and 114 prisoners.

Troops Guard Batista; Nip Revolt

Machine Guns Set Up at His Palace; Military Heads Ousted, Considered Seditious

By the Associated Press

Havana, Feb. 3.—President Fulgencio Batista announced tonight that he had taken personal command of the army, navy and national police forces, shortly after army guards threw up sandbags at strategic points inside the presidential palace and mounted machine guns at the entrances.

Batista announced also that he had accepted the resignations of Col. Jose E. Pedraza, chief of the army; Lieut. Col. Angel A. Gonzalez, navy commander in chief, and Col. Bernardo Garcia, former national police chief.

Col. Pedraza had only been appointed head of the national police force two days ago in succession to Col. Garcia.

Well-informed circles said Batista's government was facing a political storm.

3 Considered Seditious

During the day the President had held several conferences with high army officers, but the subjects discussed were not revealed.

In taking charge of all Cuba's armed forces, the President announced that the attitudes of the three men whom he replaced were considered openly seditious.

President Batista personally took charge of the armed forces tonight at Camp Columbia.

An order was broadcast to all service men who were away from home to return immediately to their houses.

Just before midnight, President Batista announced that complete tranquility was reported throughout the island.

Batista is no stranger to violence, though he has experienced little more than the customary political ferment since he sprang to fame by leading the classic "revolt of the six sergeants" on September 4, 1933.

Just a Sergeant Then

On that day, Sergt. Batista, who had become known merely as the best stenographer in the Cuban army, organized the noncommissioned officers and enlisted men behind him in a drive that ousted the army's officers and sent President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes packing.

In December, 1939, he resigned from the army and dropped his modest title of colonel—the only one he ever had accepted—and announced he would run for the presidency.

U. S. Legation Clerks in Norway Held by Germans

By the Associated Press

A clerk and a former clerk in the American Legation at Oslo have been held by German authorities since early in December on charges of possessing documents hostile to the Norwegian government, State Department officials said last night.

The men are Ivan Jacobsen, of Seattle, Wash., who had been employed in the legation since early last year, and Frank Nelson, a temporary employe last summer. Nelson's mother lives at St. Joseph, Mo.

They have had a preliminary hearing and a final hearing is expected any day, officials said.

It's Fun to Help

Cards Start Blood-Bank Funds Moving

The campaign of the card tables—the annual series of St. Valentine bridge parties to raise money for the Children's Hospital blood bank—got under way last night.

Two hundred persons played bridge in the clubrooms of the Kenneth Nash Post of the American Legion and its Auxiliary Unit at 209 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. At the end of the evening E. A. Totten, chairman of the party committee, presented Department Commander William H. Hargrave with a $60 check for the blood bank fund.

Attending the first party of the campaign with Commander Hargrave were Heywood Saunders, department membership officer; Lieut. Comdr. William A. Corley, U. S. N., retired, department child welfare officer, and Mrs. Thomas Crompton, chapeau of the Eight and Forty.

Essentially a part of Children's Hospital, whose patients—both charity and paying—are its chief beneficiaries, the blood bank there, supported by annual February benefit parties, also serves other hospitals.

It is neither necessary nor practical for all to have blood banks of their own. Such a facility, however, is indispensable at Children's, more than half of whose patients receive transfusions during their stays.

Besides supplying blood and plasma for more than 4,000 transfusions of its own cases, the hospital

Child Labor Amendment Fight to Go On

Miss Lenroot Says Wage Act Doesn't Cover Intrastate Commerce

The fight for a child labor amendment to the Constitution will go on irrespective of the Supreme Court's action in upholding the wage-hour law, Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, said yesterday.

The wage-hour law merely prohibits (in addition to its wage and hour provisions) the employment of children engaged in industries in interstate commerce. Youngsters in strictly intrastate industries can still be protected by Federal legislation only through Constitutional amendment. Twenty-eight States of the necessary 36 have ratified the amendment to this end.

In yesterday's wage-hour decision, the Supreme Court overruled its 1918 decision in Hammer vs. Dagenhart, saying:

"Whatever their motive and purpose, regulations of commerce which do not infringe some constitutional prohibition are within the plenary power conferred on Congress by the commerce clause . . .

"These principles of constitutional interpretation have been so long and repeatedly recognized by this court as applicable to the commerce clause that there would be little occasion for repeating them now were it not for the decision of this court 22 years ago in Hammer vs. Dagenhart. In that case it was held by a bare majority of the court over the powerful and now classic dissent of Mr. Justice Holmes setting forth the fundamental issues involved, that Congress was without power to exclude the products of child labor from interstate commerce . . .

"The conclusion is inescapable that Hammer vs. Dagenhart was a departure from the principles which have prevailed in the interpretation of the commerce clause both before and since the decision . . ."

Mission Speakers Tell 10,000 Of World's Need for Faith

By Robert Tate Allan

(Other Stories and Today's Program, Pages 11 and 13.)

Climaxed by crowded community meetings last night, the first daily sessions of the National Christian Mission drew 10,000 persons and found mission speakers urging the church to awaken to its new responsibilities to society.

The church must be more deeply concerned about social, economic, domestic, international and other issues, declared the speakers as they went to women's forums, citizens' meetings, club luncheons, church seminars. "Christianity Has the Answer," was their slogan.

Today, many will attend Calvary Baptist Church to hear Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt address the "Christian Social Relations" seminar at 3 p. m. on "The Migrant Situation in Washington."

People from about 20 Protestant congregations of the Chevy Chase area, mingling at last night's mass meeting at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, heard Dr. Harold C. Phillips, pastor of First Baptist Church of Cleveland, declare:

"Though Christianity begins in a feeling, it ends in a word, and the final test of the genuiness of our loyalty or love for Christ is our willingness to assume the responsibilities and duties which inhere in the coming of the Kingdom."

Speaking at the same hour to the gathering at Emory Methodist Church, Methodist Bishop Paul B. Kern, of Nashville, Tenn., said:

"We need God to bring a sense of poise and quietness into our hurried and driven lives. We need God to guide into worthy ends the marvelous enginery of power that

The Supreme Court, in two decisions of major importance, yesterday upheld constitutionality of the wage-hour law and dealt a severe blow to the Justice Department's efforts to employ antitrust legislation against labor unions.

Latest in a long series of New Deal enactments to be sustained by the court, the wage-hour law received judicial blessing in a broadly worded, unanimous opinion written by Justice Stone.

Specifically overruling the famous 1918 decision in the case of Hammer vs. Dagenhart, which denied Congress the power to forbid child labor, the Supreme Court held that the wage-hour law, which includes child-labor restrictions, was well within the field of Congressional control under the commerce clause.

$100,000,000 in Wages Upheld

"The power of Congress under the commerce clause," said the court, "is plenary to exclude any article from interstate commerce subject only to the specific prohibitions of the Constitution," and extends even to intrastate activities "where they have a substantial effect" on trade between the States.

The decision sustains wage increases amounting to $100,000,000 annually, the Wages and Hours Division of the Labor Department said yesterday. Among the industries principally affected are clothing, shoes, textiles and lumber, it was said.

In a 5-to-2 opinion written by Justice Frankfurter, the court yesterday struck at Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold's campaign to prosecute labor unions under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act for interference with interstate commerce arising, for example, out of jurisdictional strikes.

Indictment Held Invalid

With Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts dissenting, the court held invalid a Sherman Act indictment of President William L. Hutcheson and other officers of the Carpenters Union (A. F. of L.) for picketing and conducting a boycott against Anheuser-Busch, Inc., be-

Immediate construction of 1,000 housing units for defense workers in the Washington area was approved last night by President Roosevelt.

3-Day Debate Opens

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Warnings that the United States risks a two-ocean attack in event Britain falls were heard yesterday as the House opened three days of debate on the Administration's aid-England bill.

It is "no secret" that Germany is bringing pressure on Japan to attack this country, Representative Luther A. Johnson, of Texas, ranking majority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, told his colleagues.

"We have two oceans and two continents to defend with a one-ocean Navy," Johnson said. "It will be six years before our two-ocean Navy will have been built. . . . We therefore have a double menace of war if England fails."

Johnson said he made the statement in answer to opposition charges that the United States is in no danger of invasion. He said such charges "lulled the people into a false sense of security."

Sees Danger as "Very Great"

He asserted that both public and executive information given the committee by high Army and Navy officials showed "there is very great danger."

More than a score of Administration and opposition members took the floor in the first day's debate, Republicans centering criticism on Presidential powers rather than the principle of aid.

The recent Capitol visits of Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, figured in the debate when Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, demanded that Chairman Bloom tell what had transpired at the Ambassador's visit to his office.

Bloom called the question "improper," but told of the visit.

"The principal talk—if the gentleman wants to know was about Magna Carta—maybe the gentleman has heard of it," said Bloom.

The Foreign Affairs chairman said Halifax asked about "timetable" on the aid bill.

"I hadn't heard that expression, and he asked me about the procedure and I knew then what he wanted, so I told him."

Bloom said Halifax phoned to ask if "he might come to see me" and Bloom told him to come up as "no man is going to outdo me in politeness."

125 to 150 Majority Predicted

Dirksen declared it was "extraordinary and unusual procedure" for the ambassador to discuss the bill with the Foreign Affairs chairman.

Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, replied that there was nothing "unusual" about the visit; that the bill already had been reported and was before the House when Halifax called.

So certain were leaders of a substantial majority for the bill when the vote comes this weekend that

Willkie Gets Kiss and a Beer, To See King and Queen Today

'Red Rose of Lancaster' Is Given To American at Manchester Town Hall

By the Associated Press

Manchester, England, Feb. 3.—Kissed, cheered and honored with the "Red Rose of Lancaster," Wendell L. Willkie cut short his tour of north England's bomb-scarred industrial centers tonight to return to London for a meeting tomorrow with King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

He said he had been requested by the British government "for safety's sake" not to divulge the time of his departure for the United States.

"I found the answer to the question I set out to ask," he told newsmen.

"The people's spirit is magnificent . . . I don't believe any nation in the world is more united in any cause than the people of the British Isles."

Willkie received the "Red Rose of Lancaster"—a high honor springing from the bloody fifteenth century Wars of the Roses, in which the red rose signified the House of Lancaster and the White Rose the House of York—before a large crowd at Town Hall.

Then he set out for the busy river dockyards. At one point, an old woman pressed through the crowd to hand him a bottle of beer and planted a smacking kiss on his cheek.

As luncheon guest of Lord Derby at a Manchester hotel, he met civic and industrial leaders while university students staged a demonstration outside which blocked traffic for an hour.

Willkie also toured the bombed areas of Liverpool and expressed astonishment "to see this destruction and find the loss of life so small."

Field Assures 121st Squadron Recognition

Guard Unit Given CAA Funds; Army Training Expected

Construction of a field and hangar for the 121st Observation Squadron, District National Guard, and Federal recognition within 30 days has been assured, The Post learned yesterday.

It was learned that induction into active service for a year's training probably will follow shortly after the squadron is accorded Federal recognition. In that case, it will go into training at a base distant from Washington before its own field, on which recognition depended, is completed and probably will not use its field until after the training period is ended.

A week ago the District Commissioners turned down a request of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District Guard commander, for $50,000 to be used in constructing a hangar at Beltsville, where the Department of Agriculture had provided land for a flying field. This action apparently doomed the squadron to die aborning, since it could not gain Federal recognition, with equipment, clothing, supplies and pay, until it possessed an acceptable operations base.

However, The Post learned that work on the field already has begun under an appropriation of $125,000 by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. A steel and concrete hangar and operations building, to cost $350,000, will be started on the site as soon as preparation of the landing area has progressed sufficiently far.

Recognition of the squadron, the first ever organized here and the newest unit of the District National Guard, will be accorded as soon as it becomes "obvious" that acceptable facilities are actually being constructed. Induction of the organization's 32 officers and 136 men may come even before it is supplied

Lease Bill Means War, Senators Told

Philip La Follette, Norman Thomas Take Stand at Hearing

Enactment of the lend-lease bill would take this Nation far along the road to war, two opponents of the measure declared yesterday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Former Gov. Philip F. La Follette of Wisconsin expressed the conviction that President Roosevelt would regard passage of the measure for all-out aid to nations fighting the Axis powers as "a mandate" to take action that would get us into the war. He declared that in March, 1939, French Premier Daladier told him Britain and France would expect "money, materials and men" from the United States if they engaged in war with Germany.

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, declared the bill would empower the President to "commit acts of war," would mean the abdication of Congress and vest in Mr. Roosevelt

Means Committee Approves Debt Limit of 65 Billion

Legislation to raise the Federal debt limit to $65,000,000,000 and to make future Federal securities fully taxable was approved formally yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The bill also would eliminate the present $4,000,000,000 limit on obligations that might be issued for defense purchases—a maximum Congress set when it authorized a $4,000,000,000 debt limit increase to the present $49,000,000,000 last fall.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the committee said he hoped to obtain House action within ten days.

Army Bomber Is Found Smashed With Seven Dead

By the Associated Press

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 3.—Two men found the Army's missing two-motored bomber today, half buried in the side of a mountain about 70 miles south of here, with its seven occupants dead.

The bomber disappeared January 16 on a routine flight from McChord Field, Wash., to the Muroc, Calif., bombing range.

Harry and Bill Studhalter, brothers living in the Bear Canyon woods, arrived in Morton, Wash., late today with news of the discovery.

They said they found the plane about 20 miles southwest of Morton in a dense growth near the base of Huckleberry Mountain.

They said they had seen the plane January 16 when it passed over their home at an altitude of about 600 feet. They could not figure out how the plane would negotiate the mountain while flying at such an altitude and, when it was reported missing, started a search.

Spurred by a $1,000 reward offer the brothers made three trips into the area. They said the journey to the wreck scene was so difficult it would be nearly impossible for a search party to travel tonight. It took them eight hours to make the round trip.

All aboard the plane were dead. They were: Lieut. Robert M. Krummes, Boise, Idaho, pilot; Lieut. Charles T. Nielsen, Eau Claire, Wis., copilot; Lieut. John F. Geis, Seattle, navigator; Technical Sergeant Hearn A. Davis, Tacoma, engineer; Sergt. Leo H. Nietling, Scio, Oreg., radio operator; Sergt. Paul L. Maas, Quincy, Ill., bombardier, and Lieut. Lewis E. Mackay, Lincoln, Nebr., a passenger.

50,000 Troops To Be Trained In D. C. Area

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Military posts in the vicinity of the Capital will have a combined garrison of 50,000 soldiers by June 15—virtually double their existing strength — the War Department disclosed yesterday.

An official forecast of the "eventual populations of Army posts, camps, and stations" fixed the number of officers and enlisted men in continental United States on that date at 1,317,100.

No data were given as to the strength of the overseas garrisons, but it was noted that on a basis of an Army of 1,418,000 men and 97,000 officers, expected to be in uniform by late June, some 198,000 would be available for assignment to Panama, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, Alaska, Philippines, the leased island bases and miscellaneous duties in the United States.

Meade Biggest Post

Arlington Cantonment, Va., 1,100.
Fort Belvoir, Va., 15,900.
Bolling Field, D. C., 1,400.
Fort George G. Meade, Md., 27,200.
Fort Myer, Va., 2,000.
Miscellaneous units in Washington, Walter Reed Hospital, Army War College, etc., total about 2,500, officials said.

These posts now have a population of about 26,000, it was said. Biggest expansion will come at Fort Belvoir, which now has about 3,300 men, and Fort Meade, which has some 14,000.

Of the 1,317,100-man continental Army, nearly 1,000,000 will be stationed at posts in the South. The largest will be Fort Bragg, N. C., with a garrison of 60,000. Fort Meade will be fifteenth in size among the mainland posts.

Army Got 886 Planes in Year

Meanwhile, Secretary of War Stimson made public the annual report of former Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson for the last fiscal year. The latter, reviewing the procurement planning and industrial mobilization studies undertaken by the War Department in the last 20 years, declared that without such plans the "successful and timely execution of the present arms program would have been impossible.

He stated that the program of "educational orders" for industry inaugurated three years ago should save from 4 to 12 months in getting plants receiving them into full production of armaments.

Contrasting present aircraft deliveries with those of the past, Johnson revealed that the Army received 886 planes costing $49,000,000 in the last fiscal year. This number, he said, nearly equaled the total number bought in the previous eight years.

"powers greater than those of Winston Churchill and equaled only by those of Josef Stalin."

As La Follette and Thomas were assailing the bill before a crowd which jammed the hearing room, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, leader of the Senate fight aganist the measure, returned from Florida, fully recovered from his recent attack of influenza. He immediately began a series of conferences with members of the noninterventionist bloc.

Meanwhile, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who delivered a scorching attack upon the bill before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, advised the Senate committee he did not desire to appear before the latter group, as he had nothing to add to his previous statement.

LaFollette testified yesterday that Daladier had told him in March, 1939, that France, expecting "money, materials and men" from this country, was "going to need them and expect them soon."

"The money and materials are in this bill," the Wisconsin witness continued, "and I have no hesitancy in saying that the President would be justified in regarding the legislation as a mandate to carry out the full implications of entrance into the war."

He said the bill was so broadly worded that weapons of war could include "virtually every piece of property in this country," all of which, he said, the President could acquire and "dispose of to foreign countries on any terms he sees fit."

While denying that he is "mad at the British La Follette said that under the Nine-Power Pact this country "went out on a limb which the British sawed off."

Questioned by Committee Chairman George, he said:

"I don't believe we are dependent upon the British fleet. We can't rely on that fleet to defend American interests."

La Follette was applauded from the audience when he said:

"I believe the best way to beat Hitler and all he stands for is to do it here in the Western Hemisphere by building up our own defenses and putting our own house in order."

He and Thomas agreed that economic problems should be receiving this country's major attention. La Follette insisting the war would bring a "financial revolution" for which "we ought to prepare now."

Thomas predicted the United States gold hoard probably would become valueless in world trade because Britain, whether it won or lost, would be forced to practice new methods of trading.

Thomas told the committee that enactment of the bill would lead eventually to sending American soldiers to Europe, Asia and perhaps Africa.

"It is wholly improbable," he said, "that we will avoid the necessity of sending men. Indeed, this bill which you are now considering is backed almost equally by those who believe that it is a way to slide America gradually into war and by those who still believe somehow that it is the way to stop short of war.

"The greatest danger which this bill increases, not diminishes, is that we shall find ourselves in total war. The victory we should then want—that is to say the elimination of the power, not only of the Axis, but of Japan—logically requires troops; troops in Asia, troops in Europe, troops perhaps in Africa."

no further Administration concessions are planned.

The committee majority will stand on its four minor amendments, time-limiting the bill and imposing slight checks on Administration, it was learned.

One spokesman for the majority said informal surveys showed the bill's strength was growing. He predicted a majority of from 125 to 150 for the bill.

With merely a voice vote, and a few scattered "noes," the House adopted the rule limiting debate to three days. Beginning Thursday, the House will start voting on amendments, with speeches limited to five minutes.

Chairman Sol Bloom opened the debate with the statement that America risks more in not aiding Britain than in swiftly giving full help. He minimized, "as a matter of horse sense," the possibility of Germany declaring war because of such aid.

Sees U. S. Growing Stronger

"It is obvious that aid to Britain has not been a one-way proposition; as each day goes by we are better prepared," said Bloom.

"If we are strong enough, he (Hitler) is going to hesitate before taking us on. Aiding Britain is giving us time to get strong enough."

Representative Fish, of New York, ranking minority member of the committee, followed with a summary of the opposition case. Fish called the lend measuse as now drafted a "war bill" and presented the Republican counterproposal of a $2,000,000,000 direct credit grant to Britain.

"If this dictator-war bill passes unamended, I predict that within six months we will be involved in war in Europe and Asia, that the Government will take over our vital industries, that our civil rights will be suspended, and that we will have dictatorship in America comparable to the Nazis and Communists," shouted Fish.

Continues All Afternoon

All afternoon, until the 6:05 recess gong, the debate continued, with time equally controlled by Bloom and Fish for and against the bill.

At one point, Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, told colleagues there had been perhaps too much emphasis on keeping out of war.

Faddis said he took the position that the United States must do whatever is necessary to preserve Britain, considering even the possibility that troops may be needed. Whenever it becomes apparent it is necessary "to keep war away from this country," Faddis said he would favor going to war.

"It we blind ourselves to realities, we are lulling ourselves to sleep," the Pennsylvania Democrat said.

Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, generally sympathetic with the Administration's foreign policy, appealed to the leadership to accept "reasonable" limiting amends to the bill.

He said the measure should have provided simply "for a loan or gift of money to Britain, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, to be expended by her Government or official representatives on their own responsibility."

Eaton termed the powers provided for the President "brilliant subterfuge."

But he agreed that Hitler's objective was totalitarian world rule and the United States might not escape if Britain fell. If Hitler wins, the United States must compete "with starveling slave labor, the world over," Eaton said, adding:

"This is a battle to the death between world slavery and world freedom."

Here and there the debate crossed party lines. The bulk of the opposition came from Republicans, but there was scattered criticism from Democrats. Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, called the bill "a war measure" and asked how long it would be after passage of the bill "before our Navy may be transferred" to Britain.

Representative Charles S. Dewey (Republican), of Illinois, proposed joint custodianship by the United States and the 21 American republics of British holdings of American securities. He declared Hitler's first act, if Britain fell, would be to seize these securities "to gain economic control of South America."

In a running Republican attack on the bill, Representative Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio, said that "if there is any delay in helping England, it is due largely to the Administration's request for complete power."

Representative Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan, declared: "We are now mobilizing for war—as a matter of fact, we are in the war now."

Senate Votes $350,000,000 For Cargo Ships

The Senate passed yesterday legislation providing for a $350,000,000 emergency cargo ship construction program.

The House had approved the measure previously, but at the request of the Maritime Commission the Senate wrote in $65,000,000 of contract authorizations for the commission's regular construction program. The House must now agree to this.

The bill appropriates for the emergency program $313,500,000 to be used with $36,500,000 available from other sources to build 200 steel merchant ships and new shipyard facilities.

with aircraft. In that case, planes will be turned over to the squadron at its training base, wherever that may be.

"We're glad the District squadron has been able to arrange the necessary qualifications for recognition," said Maj. Gen. John F. Williams, chief of the National Guard Bureau. "We need all of these squadrons and we want to see them get into training as rapidly as possible."

"Federal recognition of the 121st Observation Squadron," Gen. Cox said, "will give us an opportunity to do what every one of its officers and men is determined to do. That is, to make it the best National Guard squadron in the United States."

Fourteen fledgeling pilots of the squadron now are taking flight training at Air Corps schools and the first to finish will be commissioned in May. The squadron will be commanded by Maj. James L. Higgs and will contain a leavening of veteran pilots, all of whom already have been assigned to its roster of officers. A few vacancies for qualified men to be trained as pilots still exist.

It was not known here what type of equipment the squadron will fly in service. Observation squadrons, until recently attached to divisions, flew comparatively slow and heavy planes loaded with cameras and radio for observation over the lines and for artillery fire control. Several new squadrons, however, have been equipped with twin-motor long-range reconnaissance ships used also as light bombers.

The 121st Observation Squadron was one of eight new squadrons authorized July 30, 1940. Although 33 States requested squadrons, one was given to the District.

Examination Of 208 Guards Is Made Here

Physical examination of the first 208 of approximately 1,000 District National Guardsmen mobilized for Federal service was completed yesterday, the first step in a year's training to begin within a few days at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

Men examined were members of the Twenty-ninth Division, Special Troops, commanded by Maj. Louis M. Gosorn, including the Twenty-ninth Military Police Company, Division Headquarters Detachment and Headquarters Company, Special Troops. They will leave for Meade Wednesday, under present schedules.

The men of Headquarters and Service Company, 121st Engineers, will be examined today and will be sent to Meade tomorrow or Thursday to prepare for arrival of the regiment. Its commander, Col. John W. Oehmann, who is division engineer officer, has been at Meade on special duty two weeks.

They will be followed within a day or two by companies of the First Battalion, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, whose trucks are needed at Fort Meade in advance of the arrival of other elements of the division. The battalion is commanded by Maj. John T. O'Neill, who succeeded Maj. Fletcher F. Bernsdorff, recently made United States property and disbursing officer here.

Following the Quartermaster troops, the 104th Ordnance Company, commanded by Capt. Melvin B. Harris, will be examined and sent to Meade and, finally, the remainder of the 121st Engineers.

All District troops of the Twenty-ninth Division will return to Washington later this month for a farewell review by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Guard commander. The date for the review has been set tentatively as February 16.

The District's one remaining Guard unit, Company A, 372d Infantry (colored), will not be inducted until some time in March. It will train, under present schedules, at Fort Dix, N. J.

Though District elements of the Twenty-ninth Division, all of which are troops needed for immediate duties at the camp, will be sent to Meade as rapidly as they can be examined and their property accounted for, many regiments from Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania will not be sent to camp for several weeks.

Hospital Facilities Not Ready

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, yesterday notified the War Department that hospital facilities at Fort Meade would not be ready, in his opinion, by the time the division was scheduled originally to arrive there. The hospital, which will contain 1,000 beds, was scheduled for completion February 15. Delays caused by bad weather and other conditions, Gen. Reckord said, will delay the hospital's availability until February 15 or 20.

Ambulance and hospital companies of the 104th Medical Regiment, Maryland National Guard, will be moved in as rapidly as progress of construction permits. As soon as any unit of the hospital has been completed and heated for 48 hours, Gen. Reckord said, he would order additional regiments to camp.

The District Guard will go into service with numerous changes in its officer personnel. Lieut. Col. William T. Roy, original commander of the Special Troops, resigned in December because his services as assistant parliamentarian of the House of Representatives were required here. His place was taken by Maj. Gorsorn.

Capt. George E. Levings, formerly commander of the 104th Ordnance Company, will go to Meade as assistant divisional ordnance officer, his place being taken by Capt. Harris. Capt. Cooper B. Rhodes, formerly commanding Headquarters Company, Twenty-ninth Division, has just returned from school at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and is scheduled to become assistant personnel officer of the division.

While the District Guardsmen were being inducted into Federal service under the eye of Maj. Gen. William Dryden, deputy chief of staff, and Brig. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, chief of the budget and legislative planning branch of the General Staff, four District selectees were sent to Baltimore for examination prior to induction. They were named to replace four men rejected for physical reasons at the Fort Meade induction center.

They were Clinton Foster, 323 Fourteenth Street Northwest; Oscar Pitts, 703 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest; Walter Harris, 521 Sixteenth Street Southeast, and Curtis Manning, 1342 Riggs Street Northwest.

U. S. Shiplines May Charter Danish Vessels

Direct negotiations between American shipping lines and the owners of some of the 38 Danish vessels now tied up in American ports have reached a point where an agreement as to the terms of a charter of Danish vessels to the American companies is expected in the near future, it was learned last night.

Though the negotiations between the American line officials and the representatives of the Danish shipping interests, Maersk Moller and Tatge Nyelssen, are still in the tentative stage, the expected agreement is understood to call for a long-term charter of the ships to the American companies, including the United States Lines, Moore-McCormack Lines and a number of other companies.

Negotiations have been carried on in New York for the most part, though both Moller and Nyelssen have made trips to Washington to talk with Government officials as to their views on the possible solution of the shipping problem.

The United States Government has not taken any direct part in the negotiations, but an observer has been appointed by the United States Maritime Commission to sit in on the New York conferences.

The conferences in New York are expected to continue this week, with Danish and American representatives ironing out such details as to time length of the charters, rates of insurance, and allocation of the ships to the various companies.

None of the ships would be released for use in the North Atlantic trade, it was understood, as the Danes have steadfastly refused to risk the sinking of these vessels.

Instead, the ships would have to be used outside the danger zones, particularly in the South American trade, where the increased orders of strategic materials for the American defense effort are already beginning to strain the carrying capacity of the American merchant fleet engaged in this trade.

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Feb. 3.—Argentina is studying application of an ancient Roman rule of international law to requisition idle shipping in her ports to speed delivery of foodstuffs to Britain.

A decision is reported near to take over four Danish chips as an initial move under the "rule of Angary," which Italy used in 1915, prior to her entry into the World War, to requisition 34 vessels belonging to Germany—her foe in that conflict but now her ally.

That rule, Argentines say, recognizes the right of nations to use idle shipping in their harbors urgently needed to meet national emergencies. Brazil, at present host to 30 refugee German, Italian and Danish merchantmen, applied it in 1917 to seize 42 German vessels and Spain followed suit in 1918 to requisition 90 German ships.

Observers here said that Argentine seizure of the Danish ships likely would set off a wave of similar moves throughout South American nations to relieve their acute shortage of shipping.

D.C. Area to Get 1,000 Defense Housing Units

President Roosevelt last night approved immediate construction of 1,000 housing units for defense workers in the Washington area.

While sites for the units have not yet been chosen, it was understood they would be built in nearby Virginia and Maryland, where many new defense homes already are under construction.

The units are in addition to 1,135 already being built with Federal funds and represent the District's share in a $40,000,000 defense housing program. This program was approved by the President a few hours after C. F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, recommended the expenditure for 14,375 units scattered over 36 localities in the United States, Alaska and Puerto Rico.

The District's share will cost the Federal Government approximately $3,300,000. For this area as elsewhere the dwelling units will have a shelter rental of $20 to $30 a month. The construction of each unit is limited to $3,500.

Ninety of the units to be built here will be for Army enlisted personnel. The balance will be used to house civilian workers.

Palmer's report to the President showed that the emergency has created a demand for 2,684 defense housing units in the District, of which approximately 500 either have been or will be supplied by private enterprise.

In approving Palmer's recommendation that defense activities in the localities listed "have caused a sudden and immediate need" for housing, President Roosevelt allocated the last of the $240,000,000 apropriated by Congress for defense homes.

The Army and Navy have been allotted $50,000,000 each and have a total of 27,000 housing units under construction. Of $140,000,000 provided by the Lanham Act, $100,000,000 was previously allotted for defense housing. The total program, including construction approved yesterday, calls for 70,000 units.

As with previous allocations under the Lanham Act, the Federal Works Agency will direct the new construction.

"Such need," Palmer said in his report to the President, "cannot be provided for by private capital either because the extent thereof is beyond the capacity of normal building activity in the area, or the continuance of the need is so uncertain or the rentals so limited that private capital cannot afford to take the risks involved."

The number of units and the localities where they are to be built under the new program are:

Kodiak, Alaska, 25; Rantoul, Ill., 100; Ponce, P. R., 200; Birmingham, Ala., 300; Gadsen, Ala., 150; Mobile, Ala., 500; Muscle Shoals, Ala., 500; Bridgeport, Conn., 250; New Britain, Conn., 600; Waterbury, Conn., 100; District of Columbia, 1,000; Alton, Ill., 150; Charlestown, Ind., 400; South Bend, Ind., 500; Wichita, Kans., 400; Baltimore, 2,000; Buffalo, N. # Allis-Chalmers Reports Cheer U. S. Mediator

Dr. John R. Steelman, director of conciliation for the Department of Labor, last night expressed optimism over possibility of settlement of the strike at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.'s plant at West Allis, Wis., where millions of dollars worth of defense orders are tied up.

After a conference with John Owens, labor consultant of the National Defense Commission, and Msgr. Francis P. Haas and Thomas F. Burns, who returned yesterday from West Allis, Steelman said:

"After hearing first hand detailed reports from Msgr. Haas and Mr. Burns, I am convinced the two parties (C. I. O. unions and the Allis-Chalmers Co.) are much closer together than recent press reports made it appear.

"Our next steps and future plan of action will be determined after I have an opportunity of conferring again with Mr. Owens."

The conference with Owens Steelman's office said, is expected today.

Meanwhile, a conference was under way at the Chicago tractor works of the International Harvester Co., where management and C. I. O. representatives met with David T. Roadley, a Federal conciliator, seeking to end the strike there.

Settlement at Guard Base

New Orleans, Feb. 3 (AP).—Construction of a $365,000 National observation base, delayed by the refusal of union workmen to work alongside WPA workers, will get under way here tomorrow following an agreement reached today.

An announcement issued by the New Orleans Building and Construction Council (A. F. L.) and signed by C. R. Nicholas, president, and Hamilton Camos, secretary-treasurer, said that work would start tomorrow "pursuant to the Federal Government's request that the settlement be reached immediately."

The council said the settlement is "strictly on a job basis and is not to be considered a precedent for future construction projects in the vicinity of New Orleans."

Eight Union Members Sentenced

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 3 (AP).—Federal Judge Leslie R. Darr today sentenced eight union members to prison terms following conviction on charges they conspired to dynamite TVA power lines serving a plant against which they were conducting a strike.

M. C. Anderson, of Bessemer, Ala., organizer for the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C. I. O.), was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and fined $5,000.

Ed Simonds, Felton Woodward, Earl Hubbard, John David Queen, R. L. Ballew and R. L. Rhodes were given prison terms of two years and fines of $1,000. Marion Luther Ellis was sentenced to 15 months' imprisonment.

Counsel for the defendants announced they would appeal the convictions.

With the exception of Anderson, those convicted were members of the Polk County local union.

British Producer Tells How Shaw Defied Nazi Bombs

New York, Feb. 3 (INS).—Gabriel Pascal, English film producer, arrived here on the S. S. Exeter today with the negative of "Major Barbara," which was filmed under fire, and an amusing anecdote about George Bernard Shaw.

Shaw was present much of the time while "Major Barbara," his successful play, was being filmed, Pascal said. One day a wave of Nazi bombers came over and the whole picture outfit, with the exception of Shaw, promptly went into the shelters.

"Shaw went outside immediately," Pascal declared. "Wearing a white trenchcoat and white helmet, he was a perfect mark for the bombers, but he just stood there and shook his fist and yelled:

"'Dr. Goebbels, your message has arrived, but you shall not drive me to shelter.'"

Capt. Baird Named District's Defense Liaison Officer

Capt. Willett J. Baird, aide to Brig. Gen. John Greely, commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade, yesterday was appointed to serve as liaison officer between the War Department and the District's Defense Committee on Welfare and Consumer Interest.

Capt. Baird has been on duty at the War Department for three months, following service in the Panama Canal Zone and Fort Benning, Ga.

The Commissioners also approved the temporary appointment of John H. Hanna, jr., test engineer for the Potomac Electric Power Co., to replace Walter C. Lockhart as a member of the District Board of Steam Engineers while the latter is on active military duty.

Two British Ships Sunk in 24 Hours, Nazis Announce

Berlin, Feb. 3 (U.P.).—The sinking of three British ships and severe damage to two others in the last 24 hours was reported today by the German high command and DNB official news agency. A Stuka dive-bomber was said to have sunk a 3,000-ton merchantman off the English coast today. Bombers sank two merchantmen—of 4,000 and 3,000 tons—Sunday at an unspecified location.

A merchantman was said to have been set afire south of Southend Sunday and another southeast of Harwich was said to have received several direct bomb hits.

Labor Watch Set on Defense Subcontracts

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

The program of "farming out" defense orders, the intensification and expansion of which was announced yesterday by the Office of Production Management, will be prevented from becoming a device to escape the provisions of the Walsh-Healey Act, according to the labor standards division of the Labor Department.

L. Metcalfe Walling, Walsh-Healey Act administrator, declared yesterday that his division was beginning a drive for more thorough inspection of labor standards in defense industries, with particular attention to the shops of "substitute" contractors who, as distinguished from "subcontractors," are required to abide by the eight-hour day and prevailing wage provisions of the law.

"Substitute" contractors, it was explained, are those who do the same type of work as that performed in the factories of prime contractors; "subcontractors" engage in processing work not usually done by the prime contractor.

Investigators Added

Walling said additional investigators were being employed by his division to give special attention to work performed on defense orders. He emphasized, however, that bona fide subcontractors still remained exempt from Walsh-Healey Act provisions and need not fear their imposition. He added that in most cases the subcontractors were already subject to requirements of the Wage-Hour Act, which are still applicable and are not being waived on defense production.

Expansion of the farming-out program, the OPM said, will be accomplished through added personnel in 36 field offices where business, financial, contract and engineering experts will provide "decentralized advisory services" to business enterprises holding or seeking defense contracts. Particular attention will be given to small businesses, eligible for subcontracting work.

The Office of Small Business Activities, in charge of this work, will be transferred for administrative purposes from the OPM purchases division to the production division, and will be known hereafter as the Defense Contract Service.

Mehornay Named Head

The new unit will be directed by Robert L. Mehornay, president of the North-Mehornay companies of Kansas City, Mo., who has been conducting the work of the Small Business Office for the last three months.

Nucleus of personnel for the regional offices, it was announced, will come from the Federal Reserve System, with senior officers in each of the 12 banks and 24 branches serving as field agents, under the direction of Ernest G. Draper, member of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors. Each field office, it is contemplated, will have several full-time experts and other part-time advisers.

The special section of the Defense Contract Service devoted to expansion of the subcontracting system will be under the direction of Joseph L. Trecker and Francis J. Trecker, machine tool builders of Milwaukee, Wis., who have previously been serving in an advisory capacity to the War Department.

A.F.L.'s Ford Claim Foolish, Murray Says

Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., last night declared the claim of William Green that the A. F. L. has organized a majority of workers in two Ford plants is a "ridiculous bluff which will fool nobody."

At the same time Harry H. Bennett, Ford personnel director, told the Associated Press at Detroit that the company would continue to confer with the Federation of Labor as it has for many years but would not sign a contract. He said Henry Ford "isn't going to insist upon anyone joining anything."

Green, federation president, announced Sunday night that a majority of production employes in Ford's Lincoln and River Rouge plants had been signed up by the A. F. L.

And on Capitol Hill Undersecretary of War Patterson told the House Military Affairs Committee that officials had been much surprised when Ford last week gave up a $10,000,000 contract rather than accept labor policy provisions written into the contract.

Patterson, saying that "trivial" labor charges would not be permitted to hold up work on a defense contract or prevent award of a contract, told the commitee that a difference of opinion in the Defense Commission was responsible for the labor clauses having been included in only one of three types of contracts used by the War Department. He indicated that when the difference of opinion finally is straightened out the clauses may be in all contracts or be dropped altogether.

He said also that the past labor record of a contractor would not be a factor in the question of compliance with clauses in the contract.

Murray said in a statement that the A. F. L. claim of having organized a majority in the two Ford plants was a "pitiful attempt" to stab the C. I. O. "in the back." His statement said:

"Any check-up at Detroit will show that the only union organizing work under way has been that of the C. I. O. United Automobile workers. The A. F. L. is not even in the picture, except insofar as its officials may have attempted some backdoor intrigues with the Ford Co."

After declaring the C. I. O. office has had to be kept open day and night "to cope with the queues of applicants,"

Appeals Court Rules Out NLRB 'Policing' of Labor Contracts

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—The Third United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today that the National Labor Relations Board has no jurisdiction in disputes arising between an employer and employe after the employer has signed a contract with a labor union.

With the signing of a "genuine collective bargaining agreement," Judge Albert B. Maris wrote, "the goal of the (National Labor Relations) Act has been achieved and the board has no further jurisdiction with respect to the labor dispute which has been settled by agreement."

The decision set aside a National Labor Relations Board order to reinstate Agnes Fahy, employe of the Newark (N. J.) Morning Ledger Co., with back pay from the time of her dismissal in September, 1937. At the time, she was president of the Newark unit of the American Newspaper Guild. She and the guild contended that she was discharged because of activity on behalf of the guild. This the NLRB upheld.

The circuit court concurred in this also, but Judge Maris' opinion said:

"The question presented to us is whether the function of the board under the act had not been fully performed when the parties bargained and reached an agreement so that they were relegated, as to breaches of the agreement, to arbitration, if provided for, or to their remedy in the courts."

The function of the National Labor Relations Board, the court said, is "to pave the way for achievement" of "voluntary agreements" between employers and employes "as to wages, hours and other conditions of employment . . . and thus industrial strife and unrest will be reduced."

No dissent was filed to Judge Maris' opinion, which added:

"The board is concerned only with those situations in which an employer and his organized employes have not yet reached agreement; it is no part of its duty to police the relations between an employer and his employes under a collective bargaining agreement.

"To construe the act otherwise would be to impose upon the board the herculean task of supervising the day-to-day relations of employers and employes in that vast and ever-growing segment of commerce and industry in which successful collective bargaining has well nigh eliminated industrial strife."

Secret Nazi Field Found in Brazil, Dr. Ryan Says

Establishment of American military bases in a Latin-American country has been unofficially suggested by the president of the republic concerned, the Rev. Dr. Edwin Ryan, secretary of the Ibero-American Institute of the Catholic University of America, disclosed last night in a lecture at the university. Dr. Ryan also stated he has learned that a secret airport under construction by Nazis has been located in Brazil. The Latin-American republic willing to have United States military bases established on its soil was not identified.

Dr. Ryan's talk inaugurated the series of talks on "Latin America Last Month," which he will give the first Monday night each month until the close of the university in June. The River Plate Conference now in progress in Montevideo and the forthcoming Amazon Conference to be held in Brazil were also referred to by Dr. Ryan.

Weather Curbs Massed Raids Upon Britain

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 3.—Single German raiders harassed British towns today, and a high Royal Air Force officer expressed the opinion that such forays would persist until a break in weather permitted a return to mass bombing.

But, continued the officer, superior aircraft and pilots of Britain "will again beat back any return to mass daylight bombing as a preliminary to invasion," despite the fact that Germany's first line air strength will be "measurably in excess" of Britain's on March 1. The British, he held, are "a little ahead" in night bombing experimentation.

An air raid alert accompanied by a burst of antiaircraft fire was heard in London shortly before midnight, but the warning ended within a few minutes. Incendiary bombs dropped by a lone German raider were put out quickly.

A few German aircraft braved bitter Channel weather to penetrate other parts of Britain tonight, but no heavy attack was reported.

The worst blizzard of the winter died down over the Strait of Dover after an all-day snowfall, but the weather turned bitter cold.

Bad Weather Factor

Raids like today's, which caused deaths and damages in London, East Anglia, Kent, northeastern England and central Scotland, are not, in the opinion of the officer, "the lull before the invasion storm."

He attributed the comparative quiet to:

1. "Dreadful" flying weather.
2. Repair and overhauling of a large number of German bombers damaged in night operations.
3. Diversion of a "considerable" number of German bombers to the Mediterranean fighting zone.

"There is no doubt," the officer said, "that the Germans are suffering a higher percentage of losses due to weather than the personnel of the squadrons like."

A child was killed when a stick full of small bombs was dropped on the outskirts of London by a plane which sped away before antiaircraft guns could be brought into action.

The R. A. F. officer said Britain's airmen looked for action in the spring.

He described a number of Nazi airfields in France as "primitive and unsuitable for heavy bombers."

Won't Go Far Inland

Mass bombings preceding invasion are expected in daylight, he said, but not very far inland "because such attacks failed last year." The heavy daylight attacks would be designed to isolate "battlefields on the beaches," the officer said.

"The Germans have not developed fighters superior to those of the British which beat them last summer, while we have gone steadily on," he declared.

The best American plane, he continued, is "the one we get soonest in large numbers."

In another reliable quarter, it was predicted that American-made bombers would be flying across the Atlantic to Britain at the rate of 1,000 a month by May.

"When it is announced, it is more likely to be a French baby than a British one," he said cryptically, and would not amplify the remark.

No Price Rise if Costs Aren't Hiked

Pittsburgh, Feb. 3 (AP).—Pledging Republic Steel Corporation to forego price advances "so long as costs remain what they are," Chairman Tom Girdler declared tonight that imposition of increased wages upon the steel industry "would greatly increase the cost of national defense" as well as bring a threat of inflation.

Before the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania he also said the country's steel-making capacity was "reassuring."

With raw materials and labor the two most important cost factors in steel, Girdler said the price of scrap metal used in steelmaking had been a source of concern "but under Government pressure it has settled back to less abnormal levels."

"The problem of wage advances is now confronting the industry and the millions of American people who must pay for the defense program with the sweat of their brow," he continued. "It may as well be recognized that increased wages, if forced upon the steel industry, not only would greatly increase the cost of national defense, but almost certainly would touch off a 'vicious spiral' of inflation throughout the whole structure of our country."

British Torpedo Planes Damage Huge Power Dam in Sardinia

By the United Press

London, Feb. 3.—British Swordfish planes of the fleet air arm, using aerial torpedoes for the first time in an attack on an inland objective, have damaged Italy's power dam on the Island of Sardinia, an admiralty communique said today.

The daylight attack on the huge Tirso Dam, at the head of the largest artificial lake in Europe, was announced after a predawn bombing of Nazi bases in northwestern France.

The combined attacks striking at both ends of the Axis reached across nearly 1,000 miles of Italo-German territory from the North Sea to the Mediterranean.

Tirso Dam, 197 feet high, was completed in 1923. A powerhouse in the center of the dam is the heart of Sardinia's power system, generating 20,000 kilowatts of electricity.

The terse admiralty communique said:

"On the morning of Sunday, February 2, naval Swordfish aircraft carried out a successful attack on one of the main sources of power supply in Sardinia. One of our aircraft is missing."

(Today's Italian war communique in Rome minimized the results of the attack. "Enemy planes coming from the west flew over Sardinia, dropping bombs and two torpedoes, without any result, aimed at Tirso Dam," the communique said. "Other bombs were dropped in open fields without causing damage or victims." The fact that the planes came from the west indicated they were from a British naval unit, as Gibraltar is more than 300 miles from Sardinia.

It also would indicate that the British still are using aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean despite the severe damage done to the Illustrious by German dive bombers January 10.)

The Royal Air Force raid on northwestern France was carried out by a small force of bombers shortly before dawn during the course of an offensive patrol.

WITH THE INTRODUCTION of its glamorous new Metropolitan "Torpedo" Sedan, Pontiac rounds out the most complete line of low-priced cars in its entire history—six big, handsome De Luxe models, every one available with either a six-cylinder or an eight-cylinder engine.

The new Metropolitan Sedan takes its place among the motor car style hits of all time. Patterned after a higher-priced and sensationally successful Pontiac model, it combines unusual rear-compartment spaciousness with the privacy possible only in 4-door, 4-window design.

Furthermore, Fisher Body engineers have taken advantage of this design to give the Metropolitan a degree of smart streamlining which cannot be applied to the conventional 6-window sedan.

In addition to the new Metropolitan, Pontiac's De Luxe series now includes the 4-door 6-window Sedan; the Sedan Coupe; the 2-door Sedan; the Business Coupe and the smart Convertible Sedan Coupe.

All six of these lowest-priced Pontiacs offer the sound, time-tried engineering principles which have won Pontiac such an excellent reputation for riding comfort, handling ease and long, trouble-free service. And all of them are exceptionally economical to own and drive.

Plan to see the Metropolitan Sedan—as well as the other Pontiac "Torpedoes"—which are offered in a wide range of prices. And remember that if you can afford any new car, you can afford a Pontiac.

Hard-Pressed Italians Fight To Save Empire

By George C. Jordan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, Feb. 3.—Italian armies strung out over war fronts hundreds of miles apart, from the Albanian Mountains to Italian Somaliland in East Africa, fought tonight to hold back British and Greek forces seeking to collapse Premier Mussolini's relatively new empire.

It was tough going, with more than 1,250,000 square miles of territory to defend, including areas taken from the British in the early phases of the war.

The lion's share of the burden lay for the moment on the air force. This force, dispatches indicated, is almost constantly in the air on missions such as patrolling sea lanes, bombing convoys, machine-gunning troops, ferrying men and material, harassing rear guards and scouting over the wilderness of Ethiopia for native troops which foreign reports said were massing for a drive on Addis Ababa. There was no confirmation here, however, of the Addis Ababa reports.

Italian forces claimed that Fascist fliers had downed 104 British and Greek planes in air duels, destroyed 11 on the ground and badly damaged 53 to date in the war, while their own losses were claimed limited to 16 lost in combat and four shot down by antiaircraft fire.

The navy also was active in the struggle to give Italians breathing room in what they call "our sea," the Mediterranean.

The newspaper La Tribuna said that Italians had sunk 26 "enemy" submarines, damaged seven others and sunk 279,160 tons of shipping and that the naval antiaircraft had shot down 39 planes. Italy in that time has lost 11 submarines, the newspaper said.

Martial Law Reported

London, Feb. 3 (INS).—The Athens radio, in a broadcast picked up here, declared tonight that Premier Mussolini has proclaimed all of southern Italy to be a "war zone."

The whole southern section of the country has been placed under martial law by virtue of Mussolini's decree, the Greek radio declared.

Pilot Tells How Cannon Blew Up Nazi

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 3.—A Spitfire fighter plane, with its cannon roaring at point-blank range, blew a Heinkel bomber to bits over the Thames Estuary this afternoon.

"It was like having a dustbin emptied into your face," the 21-year-old Spitfire pilot said after diving perilously through the hail of debris.

The flier said he sighted the Heinkel at 3,000 feet, while cruising 1,000 feet below.

Climbing steeply, he said he "crept to within 50 yards of the bomber."

"Then I opened fire. The result was amazing. I hadn't given him more than a two-second burst when pieces of the bomber flew off like chips from a log and so blinded me I had to stop firing and dodge out of the way."

The bombers' crew bailed out.

In his excitement, the R. A. F. pilot left his radio transmitter turned on and listeners at his base plainly heard him shout, "I've got him! I've got him!"

And, then, a moment later: "Hell's bells—he's gone all to pieces!"

W. L. Austin Retires at 70 After Years as Census Head

William Lane Austin yesterday announced his retirement as Director of the Census, terminating more years with the bureau than attained by any other man who became its director.

His position was relinquished under the act providing for retirement at 70. He reached that age January 25.

Dr. Vergil D. Reed, assistant director of the bureau, was appointed acting director by Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones, pending the appointment of a successor.

Dr. Reed has been urged as a successor to Austin, but, it was pointed out, he is a Republican, registered as such in Brookline, Mass. He bore a major share of work in the last decennial census, and, reputedly, was responsible for much of the gigantic enterprise's success.

Austin was appointed as a clerk in the bureau on July 5, 1900; became chief clerk in 1913; chief statistician for agriculture in 1917; subsequently assistant census director and was appointed director by President Roosevelt in 1933. A Democrat, he consistently advanced through varying Administrations.

Five decennial censuses of the 16 taken since establishment of the Bureau in 1790 were encompassed in his career.

"He had just completed the direction of the most important of all the 16 censuses—the decennial census of 1940, which included not only the regular national summaries of population, manufactures, business, mines and quarries, irrigation and agriculture, but also the first national census of housing authorized by the Congress in 1939," the announcement stated.

The chief executive in the 1940 decennial census, Austin directed activities of a field force of more than 120,000 along with an administrative and statistical staff of more than 9,000.

A native of Mississippi, his first appointment in the bureau was upon recommendation of the late Senator John Sharp Williams.

Mrs. Roosevelt Won't Attend Youth Meeting

The American Youth Congress announced last night that a committee would call on Vice President Wallace today for aid in obtaining eating and housing accommodations for Negroes attending this weekend's "Town Meeting of Youth."

The Vice President's aides said last night that they would be glad to receive the committee at the office. But they added that the Vice President would be "very busy" and probably would not see the committee, "unless they have something very important to say."

Mrs. Roosevelt revealed yesterday that she would not participate in the town meeting nor aid in arrangements for it because she disagreed with the A. Y. C.'s attitude on American foreign policy.

The First Lady said she did not feel that A. Y. C.'s opposition to conscription last summer and its present opposition to increased aid to Britain were realistic.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt both spoke to the Youth Congress last year. Mrs. Roosevelt also attended many of the sessions, had youth leaders as guests at the White House and defended the A. Y. C. vigorously against charges before the Dies Committee that it was a "Communist-front" organization.

Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday she still believes most of the young people are completely sincere, although, as last year, certain of its members are Communists.

The youth leaders, headed by Joseph Cadden, A. Y. C. secretary, will be accompanied by representatives of Negro, religious, professional and civil rights groups when they call upon the Vice President at 10 a. m. today.

The A. Y. C. faced no such problem last year, leaders explained, because the meetings were held in the departmental auditorium, and the Negro delegates could eat in Government cafeterias. This year's sessions, beginning Friday, will be held at Turner's Arena.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that Government officials must sponsor meetings in the departmental auditorium and no official evidently has been willing to do so this year.

Jewish Chiefs Look To Post-War Plans

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 3.—Jewish leaders today, were confident Great Britain would defeat the Axis powers and started a program designed to restore "rights of Jews after the war."

Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, chairman of the British section of the World Jewish Congress, announced establishment of a research institute for contemporary Jewish affairs.

Perlzweig said the institute would be directed by Jewish scholars and would take "an inventory of Jewish life in Europe from 1914 to the present day, in order to prepare the Jewish people to formulate proposals . . . for reconstruction of Jewish life after the peace."

Fugitives Use Rum On Exhaust Pipe For Smoke Screen

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 3 (AP).—Federal authorities said today they had learned of a new use for liquor—dumping it on the hot exhaust pipe of an automobile to form a smoke screen.

Agents William T. Roe and Allen Bartlett, of the Salisbury alcohol tax unit office, and Constable Walter Banks tasted the acrid fumes pouring from the rear of a fleeing car in a 10-mile chase over Dorchester County roads.

As the three drew near the fugitive car, fumes began pouring out of the rear, the agents said. A second man, they said, was pouring liquor through a hole in the hear floorboards onto the exhaust pipe.

Then, the agents said, they overtook and arrested the driver, whom they identified as Thomas Kaleb Jones, 37, colored. Jones was held in Wicomico County Jail on a Federal charge of transportation of nontax paid liquor.

Alexandria Retailers Will Elect Tonight

The annual meeting of the Alexandria Retail Merchants Association will be tonight at 8 at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters, corner of Prince and Washington Streets, at which time 1941 officers will be elected. Reports also will be heard from standing committee chairmen for the past year.

Julian F. Chauncey is the retiring president of the organization.

Renew Request For Express Bus

A formal hearing on the appeal of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association's request for express bus service from Sixteenth Street and Eastern Avenue to Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, will be held at 2 p. m. today before the Public Utilities Commission.

A petition for the express service was turned down by the PUC after an informal hearing September 5. M. J. Cairns, president, and G. Mallet Prevost, secretary of the citizens' association, later told the PUC that test runs conducted by the Capital Transit Co. showed the present local bus service took nearly a third longer to make the run than the proposed express service.

Recommended route of the express would be down Sixteenth Street from the District line to Madison Street Northwest, with local stops; then along Madison to Thirteenth, and an express run from there to Thirteenth and L Streets Northwest. The bus would make local stops along Thirteenth, from L to Pennsylvania Avenue.

Court Refuses Review Of 1919 Army Decision

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue of the District Court refused yesterday to disturb a finding of an Army board of inquiry that Private Albert Maurone, Philadelphia, killed himself at Ahrweiler, Germany, in 1919, while serving with the American Army of Occupation.

Heirs of Maurone asked the court to compel the War Department to issue Maurone an honorable discharge. Government counsel contended the court could not review an administrative finding.

Benefit Substitutes Film For 'Birth of a Nation'

New York, Feb. 3 (AP).—Within a few hours of its benefit show, Bundles for Britain today substituted another film for the scheduled showing of "The Birth of a Nation," to which colored civic groups had objected.

Announcing that the picture "Four Feathers" had been substituted, Bundles for Britain said it desired "to avoid offense to any section of our people."

15 Flying Cadets 'Graduated' From Anacostia Base

Three District youths, two from Maryland, and ten from Virginia completed 30 days' elimination flight training at the Anacostia Naval Reserve Aviation Base here yesterday. They will leave today for seven months' additional training at Jacksonville, Fla.

The three District students are Allen W. Shaw, 2914 Glovers Driveway Northwest; Henryshore Noon, jr., 1601 R Street Northwest, and Harold L. Neff, 2712 Wisconsin Avenue. Upon graduation from the Jacksonville base they will be commissioned ensigns in the United States Naval Aviation Reserve and placed on three years' active duty with naval units.

More than 150 youths have been graduated from the local base during the last half-year. Under the present pilot training program of the Navy, it is planned to train 30 each month. The local program is under direction of Lieut. Comdr. T. U. Sisson.

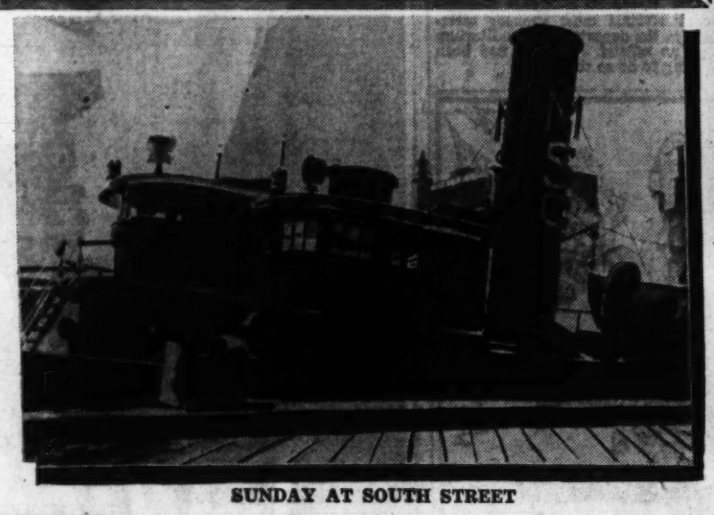
ACROSS THE WHEAT FIELDS



SUNDAY AT SOUTH STREET

Objets d' Art

Scenes of distant places come to E Street today with the exhibition of three new water colors in the east show window of The Post Building, 1337 E Street Northwest.

This week's exhibit includes "Tropic Noon," by Charles Allen, of Los Angeles; "Sunday at South Street," by Theodore C. Ewen, of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., and "Across the Wheat Fields," by Robert Franklin Gates. The water colors will be put on display at 3 p. m.

A new exhibit of American art is shown in The Post window each week through the courtesy of the Section of Fine Arts of the Federal Works Administration. Paintings are selected from the thousands of water colors submitted to the section in the recent competition for the decoration of Government hospitals.

All paintings exhibited by The Post may be purchased for $30 each from the Section of Fine Arts.

Password?—It looks like Sergt. Earl Van Ormer is giving Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, the old line of "Sure, I know you're the general, but let's see your badge, Buddy." The badge is the identification now necessary for free access to the War Department

One-Bulb Photographer No Flash-in-the Pan

Editor's note: The following note was discovered in the mail slot of The Post's photographic studio, together with the accompanying illustration. It should be of special interest to a young lady in Hagerstown, Md.

3:25 A. M.

Attn. anybody that works here.

While going home last night, and passing First and B Streets Northeast, I pulled far to my right to avoid hitting an object in the middle of the street. It looked like a jigger that they fix streets with.

I continued on to Second and B Streets Northeast and suddenly realized that this object in the middle of the street that looked like a jigger was not a jigger but an automobile. By this time I was at Third and B Streets Northeast.

I made a U turn at the intersection and proceeded back to First and B Streets Northeast.

Upon arriving I immediately saw that this car was upside down. Contained in the holder you will find attached to this confession, is the picture.

It shows a policeman named Arthur Trammell, of No. 9 Precinct. I would have made a dupe on the picture, but I had only one bulb. The car, it seems, was driven by one Melvin Greenberg, who lives at 3614 Ordway Street Northwest.

No one was hurt in the collision, and if the picture is no good, throw away this note and the negative.

Parting with that bulb was very hard, because I had planned on using it to make a picture of my niece in Hagerstown, Md., today. Oh, well, I guess I'll get her near a window and make time exposures. Irving Schlossenberg.

Odd Jobs

Harbor Master Is River Traffic Cop . . .

Lieut. William H. Carlin is Harbor Master for the District and is responsible, among other things, for saving more than 50 Washington lives every year.

His job also involves arresting speeders in motor boats and confiscating fishing craft "parked" illegally in the Washington harbor.

He also fishes an average of 45 bodies of drowned persons annually out of the Potomac River.

With his staff of 23 former seamen, Carlin estimates he has saved at least 300 lives in his six years as Harbor Master by rescuing persons from overturned boats and persons who attempt suicide.

The lieutenant, who spent 32 years as a policeman at No. 3 Precinct before becoming a "sea cop" for the District in 1935, thinks his job is "great." He says he feels more at home in a police launch than behind a desk.

The Harbor Master's office is a plain gray two-story building on the waterfront at the foot of Seventh Street Southwest. Behind it are moored eight wooden police launches and a 54-foot steel patrol boat, used chiefly to break ice in the harbor.

The harbor cops know the channel—which they patrol from the upper District line to below Alexandria—like a nautical book. And Carlin says you would be surprised to see what they find at the bottom of it. In grappling for bodies, they have brought up baby carriages, automobile bodies, bed springs, and hundreds of smaller household items.

LIEUT. WILLIAM H. CARLIN

Like other police, they have traffic problems. Speeding by small craft is the most frequent offense—the speed limit was dropped last year from 15 to six miles an hour in most of the channel. Commercial craft in the river, mostly boats bringing fish to the municipal market, never give them any trouble, Carlin says.

Other river offenses center largely on illegal fishing and placement of nets and seines in the channel. The lieutenant recently confiscated a fishing net 60 feet long, containing more than 2,000 pounds of carp and catfish.

Floods and high water are a headache to the harbor police. But a few years ago spring floods brought the situation right in the office. With the river 4 inches deep on the harbor police office floor, men on desk duty added wading boots to their regular office equipment.

With 45 miles of waterfront to patrol, Carlin's harbor police spend most of their time keeping the harbor free of obstructions and speeding boats. They have not yet had a case of smuggling.

Wage Statute Is Held Valid By High Court

cause construction work for the St. Louis brewery was being done by the rival International Association of Machinists (also A. F. of L.).

Justice Frankfurter held that the union's activity was allowable under the Sherman Act of 1890, as modified by the Clayton Act of 1914, and also by the Morris-LaGuardia Act of 1932, which he reputedly helped to draft when was a professor at Harvard.

"So long as a union acts in its self-interest and does not combine with nonlabor groups, the licit and the illicit (under the Clayton Act) are not to be distinguished by any judgment regarding the wisdom or the unwisdom, the rightness or wrongness, the selfishness or the unselfishness of the end of which the particular union activities are the means," he said. Justice Stone concurred and Justice Murphy took no part in the case.

"Usurpation by Courts"

In a vigorous protest, Justice Roberts, backed by the Chief Justice, declared that the majority interpretation of the law was "a usurpation by the courts of the functions of the Congress not only novel but fraught, as well, with the most serious dangers to our Constitutional system of division of powers."

"I venture to say," he declared, "that no court has ever undertaken so radically to legislate where Congress has refused so to do."

In its decision upholding the wage-hour law (Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938), the court maintained that Congress had the right not merely to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of goods made in violation of the law, but also to prevent their production, even when some of the goods produced remain within the State.

"The power of Congress over interstate commerce is not confined to the regulation of commerce among the States," said the Court. "It extends to those activities intrastate which so affect interstate commerce or the exercise of the power of Congress over it as to make regulation of them appropriate means to the attainment of a legitimate end, the exercise of the granted power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce."

Reverses District Court Ruling

Justice Stone declared that "the motive and purpose of a regulation of interstate commerce are matters for the legislative judgment upon which the Constitution places no restriction and over which the courts are given no control."

Yesterday's opinion reversed a Federal District Court decision quashing an indictment of the F. W. Darby Lumber Co., of Statesboro, Ga.

In a case involving the Opp Cotton Mills, of Opp, Ala., the court—again speaking through Justice Stone—unanimously upheld the Wage-Hour administrator in the procedure he followed in establishing a 32½-cent minimum wage for the textile industry. This decision means hourly wage rate increases for 175,000 textile workers, amounting to more than $10,000,000 annually, the Department of Labor said.

The Sherman Act case decided yesterday was thought by observers to have sounded the death knell for much of Assistant Attorney General Arnold's program against alleged malpractices of labor unions. But it was believed the opinion did not touch those cases where employers and employes conspire together to fix prices or for other purposes.

Narrowed by Courts

Justice Frankfurter pointed out that the Clayton Act's exemption from the Sherman law of specific practices of labor unions had been subsequently narrowed down by the Supreme Court to embrace only those trade union activities directed against an employer by his own employes.

"Such a view, it was urged both by powerful judicial dissents and informed lay opinion," said Justice Frankfurter. "misconceived the area of economic conflict that had best be left to economic forces and the pressure of public opinion and not subjected to the judgment of the courts."

Other Opinions

In other opinions, the court yesterday decided:

That improper procedure had been followed in sending to the Supreme Court litigation involving a temporary order restraining Gov. Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma from interfering with the $20,000,000 Grand River Dam project in that State.

That a 2 per cent Arkansas tax on income of domestic corporations was applicable to a bath house company operating on Federal property at Hot Springs.

That a dispute between Armour & Co. and the Alton Railroad over payment of certain charges involved administrative problems requiring primary resort to the I. C. C.

That when single-premium life-insurance policies are assigned to others at the time of issuance, the Federal gift tax should be imposed on their cost rather than the cash surrender value (three cases).

That trustees of the New Haven Railroad were not required to pay taxes assessed on the property of the Boston Terminal Co.

That the RFC had to pay costs in an unsuccessful suit.

Other decisions were:

Philadelphia Co. et al. vs. Walter L. Dipple, James P. McArdle, Ban Paul Braley and Thomas J. Hoffman; CCA (Third) affirmed.

A. F. Rawlings, receiver of the Lee County National Bank, Marianna, Ark., vs. Mrs. Ella M. Ray; CCA (Eighth) reversed.

Maryland Casualty Co. vs. Pacific Oil & Coal Co., and Joe Orteca; CCA (Sixth) reversed.

Weightstill Woods, court trustee, vs. City National Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago (two cases); CCA (Seventh) reversed.

The United States of America vs. J. W. Gilliland, Ralph Gilliland, Fred A. Williams, et al.; District Court (Eastern Texas) reversed.

Huron Holding Corporation and National Surety Corporation vs. Lincoln Mine Operating Co.; CCA (Ninth) reversed. District Court (Idaho) affirmed.

The United States vs. Kate B. Goltra and E. Field Goltra, Jr., executors of the estate of Edward F. Goltra, deceased; Court of Claims affirmed with modifications; in cross-appeal, Court of Claims affirmed.

Judiciary Square Will Miss Him

JUSTICE PEYTON GORDON, of United States District Court, will retire today

Justice Gordon Is Leaving D. C. Court

Justice Peyton Gordon, who has been a familiar figure at Judiciary Square for nearly half a century, will retire today from the bench of the District Court.

Approving Justice Gordon's request for retirement, President Roosevelt yesterday expressed appreciation of his "faithful and devoted service" and wished him many years of happiness and contentment."

Justice Gordon became eligible to retire at his full pay of $10,000 a year last April 30, when he was 70 years old and had served more than ten years on the bench. He was appointed by President Coolidge April 3, 1928.

Speculation over appointment of Justice Gordon's successor has been current since his forthcoming retirement was reported in The Post last October. Among those mentioned in informal discussions have been Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, former Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana; Judge Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court; John W. Wilson, former chief of the criminal division of the District Attorney's staff here, and former Senator Henry W. Ashhurst (Democrat), of Arizona.

Hope for Successor Soon

Legal circles have expressed hope that the post will not long be left vacant, because the court is from 12 to 18 months behind in its civil docket and faces the possibility of losing further ground in the current term.

Justice Gordon is a native of Washington and a graduate of Columbia College (now George Washington University). Admitted to the bar in 1891, he practiced until 1904 when he became assistant District attorney, serving three years. For the next six years he was a special assistant to the Attorney General, appearing for the United States in customs disputes heard in Tokyo in 1912.

When the World War came, Justice Gordon left his private practice to go to France as a major in the Judge Advocate General's office of the American Expeditionary Force. President Harding appointed him District attorney here in 1921. He was reappointed by President Coolidge and served until he ascended to the bench in 1928.

Justice Gordon suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis last April and was critically ill for some time. The necessity of his avoiding exertion prevented his return to the bench, although on several occasions he attended general sessions of the justices where problems of the court were considered.

Garner Wants Year's Rest From Public Gaze

Austin, Tex., Feb. 3 (AP).—Former Vice President John N. Garner wants to isolate himself for a year.

He disclosed that desire in a letter to the Texas House of Representatives declining to address the House.

"Prior to ending my services January 20," Garner wrote, "I decided definitely that I would eliminate myself from all public expressions for 12 months. In other words, Mr. Speaker, I want to isolate myself for that period of time."

Gallinger Dentist Claims D.C. License Exemption in Suit

Dr. Arthur Mermelstein, Gallinger Hospital dentist, claimed exemption from the District licensing code in a suit filed in District Court yesterday.

The complaint, filed by Attorney Abraham Chaifetz, said that Dr. Mermelstein, offered a $2,600 a year place at Gallinger, accepted last year and gave up a successful New York practice. Now, it is alleged, he is threatened with dismissal by the District Commissioners unless he obtains a local license.

Contending no law requires him to obtain a local license, Dr. Mermelstein asked the court to enjoin the board and the Commissioners from taking action against him.

1,200 Farmers Discuss Milk Problems Here Over Beefsteak

Some 1,200 farmers and wives finished up their milking early yesterday and converged on Washington for their annual midday banquet and meeting of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Scoffing at the average Washingtonian's lunch of a sandwich or salad, the dairymen put away a six-course beefsteak dinner at the Willard Hotel.

B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the association, earlier told the members that milk sales by the association last year were 3,000,000 gallons more than in 1939.

The farm cooperative had gained 15 per cent in membership and now has 1,285 producers in its fold.

A nonprofit-making organization, the association last year split a $25,000 surplus among the members in a thirteenth check.

Farmers generally expressed satisfaction with the Federal marketing order put into operation a year ago and reported that demands for milk are growing by leaps and bounds with the influx of national defense workers.

Guests of the association at the dinner included officials of the District government, the Agriculture Department, and the neighboring dairy cooperative of Baltimore. Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, also was present.

Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, was toastmaster. Sir James Alexander, editor of the Glasgow Chronicle, Glasgow, Scotland, made a short talk.

District Court Needs

Washington is on the horns of a cruel dilemma in the argument over a new District Court building. The Washington Taxpayers Association is right in its stand that we should not erect a judicial palace costing three or four million dollars until all other possible solutions have been explored. The District is embarking on a vitally needed long-range program of rebuilding its welfare plant, and expenditures in that direction will leave little resources in the general fund for some years to come.

Yet physical congestion in the District Court amounts almost to a public nuisance. There are no waiting rooms for jurors and witnesses, who therefore crowd the halls. The court cannot have a library, and the District Attorney's library is scattered among his subordinates. The auditor's quarters are inadequate. The jury commissioner's room is so crowded that it has been said the jury lists are curtailed because there is no more space for filing cabinets. And endless delay and inconvenience to lawyers and witnesses is caused by the quartering of the grand jury, the domestic relations commissioner and two divisions of the District Court in the Police Court Building.

Despite all these inconveniences, it is possible that the District Court could continue for some time to operate on the present basis without great detriment to justice. But no one can deny that a new building eventually will be an absolute necessity. The Park and Planning Commission, the senior circuit judges and many members of the bar agree that the ideal site is that of the old Pension Office, which the General Accounting Office will vacate as soon as the new building of the G. A. O. is completed. To insure that the Government will not quarter some other essential agency in this spot, it would be necessary to present legislation at once looking toward the erection of a court building there.

Back To 1929

Publication of the 1940 figures for our national income show that in terms of dollars we have won back a total higher than any figure since 1930. The Department of Commerce notes, as a matter of fact, that we are only short by 10 per cent of the boom total for 1929. However, rising money income does not necessarily mean an accompanying increase in the real income of a nation in terms of goods and services. If it did, the catastrophic inflation that followed the last World War in France and Germany, sending prices and money incomes to dizzy heights, would have spelt prosperity instead of national bankruptcy.

Still income statistics throw a good deal of light upon economic conditions if they are corrected to allow for changes in population and in price levels. The Department of Commerce, for instance, takes account of the fact that about 10,500,000 more people were living in the United States in 1940 than in 1929, and sharing in the reduced money income. On the other hand, both wholesale prices and living costs have declined roughly 18 per cent since 1929, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates, with the result that the purchasing power of the consumer's dollar has increased substantially. Making due allowance for these interim population and price changes, the Department of Commerce concludes that real per capita income—that is, income in terms of goods and services—is about as high as it was in 1929. Moreover, labor's share in the aggregate national income rose during the latter half of 1940 to the highest percentage attained in many years—encouraging evidence that the benefits of expanding income are being widely distributed among the people.

It seems safe to assume, therefore, that the Nation is in much better position than it has been for many years to make the sacrifices essential to the carrying through of the defense program. Productive resources in the form of labor and capital will have to be shifted in great quantity to creation of implements of destruction; debts and taxes will have to be shouldered in increasing volume to pay for such equipment. Inevitably living standards will suffer, but if real income has been raised to the 1929 level, as the statistics indicate, the extra burden will be easier to carry than at any other time during the past decade.

So Much On So Little

Imagination is not necessary in thinking over the implication of the defense of the tiny British Isles. It is all written down. Just as clearly marked as the blueprint for Europe, for instance, is the blueprint for Asia, where Japan is awaiting the Nazi extinction of British independence as the green light allowing her to spread over Oceania. The waiting time is being employed in such diplomatic maneuverings as the recent Japanese exchange with the Dutch East Indies.

The latest development shows that the Dutch in Batavia aren't to be beguiled with words. To Mr. Matsuoka's suggestion that the Dutch East Indies "should be in intimate and inseparable relationship with our country," the Dutch have just returned a resounding no. The answer is no more than one expected. Like the motherland, which was so trusting that it ordered its never-delivered big guns from Krupp, the Dutch East Indies began to think about defense late in the day. But since it became an orphan, it has been arming unremittingly. Perhaps the Dutch armament wouldn't be of much avail against naval and air attack by Dai Nippon. However, in addition to armament, the Dutch are favored by their strategic situation. The Dutch East Indies form an immense archipelago of islands which make landings easy but comprehensive control difficult. And the key to Netherlands India, as to the remainder of Oceania, is Singapore, the gate of Asia, and the nutcrackers which could bring the Dutch to heel.

Singapore, indeed, is the hub of a subcontinent of vast islands and tropical dominions and much of the British Commonwealth. Lebensraum, indeed! Singapore, accordingly, is the pot of gold at the end of the Japanese rainbow. And toward it the Japanese have been moving step by step since their land armies bogged down in China. One has to adopt Lord Salisbury's advice and study "large maps" in order to follow the destiny marked out for the Mikado's kingdom by the Nipponese jingoes. Till recently the Japanese navy's nearest base was 2,000 miles distant from Singapore. Two years ago Hainan Island, which is south of the Chinese mainland, came into Japanese possession, then the Spratly islets, which brought the air arm of Japan within 800 miles of Singapore. The thrust is thus impressive. Along with these outright grabs, the Japanese have pressed the Thailanders, who overhang Singapore on the land side, into their service, and are trying to browbeat the French in Indo-China, which has in its possession the last great harborage 800 miles east of Singapore in the port of Saigon.

No doubt the entire strategy of the Pacific is the subject of close consultation between the nations of the British Commonwealth and the United States. Our own interest in any attempt to change the status quo was clearly stated by Secretary Hull on April 17, 1940. He referred particularly to the Dutch East Indies. Aside from any strategic concern, we depend upon that rich domain for a long line of tropical products and raw materials. It follows that if we are concerned with the fate of the Dutch East Indies, we are equally tied up in the fate of Singapore. Not only is Singapore the traffic policeman of the Dutch East Indies; it is the protector of the Philippines. As Ernest O. Hauser says, in the Atlantic Monthly:

> Even to defend the Philippines, a fleet might have to be based in Singapore rather than in Manila Bay. Despite Gen. MacArthur's efforts to build up a native army in the islands, which would be able to take over when the Stars and Stripes are hauled down in 1946, Philippine defenses remain pathetically inadequate. The islands lie directly in the path of a Japanese thrust to the south, and their northern outposts are almost in sight of Japanese Formosa. A Japanese landing could be effected without much ado along any of thousands of points of the unguarded coast line; chromite, iron, copper and gold would be the booty.

But Japan no doubt will hesitate to encircle a miniature planet till the battle of Britain is decided. The orphaned Dutch in Indonesia have shown they can't be dragooned. But their future, and the future of all that vast sub-continent, is wrapped up in what happens thousands of miles away in the little speck of land known as Britain. Before the attack on Britain, "so many depended upon so few," but during the attack, so much will hang upon so little.

Exploit In The Desert

In the story of a war which is now spread over three continents and threatens to engulf all others, the battles of Fessan and Gatrun will probably rate no more than a footnote, if they get that much attention. Yet what happened in these remote corners of the Libyan desert is not without its immediate importance. For it proves that, despite the catastrophic collapse of the French armies last spring, the spirit of France is not dead.

Some months ago French Equatorial Africa threw in its lot with the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. The move had its moral value; its practical significance appeared to be limited, particularly when, after the fiasco at Dakar, it became evident that French West Africa was determined to remain loyal to Vichy. But the military leaders in French Equatorial Africa were not content with rendering only platonic support to the British. Some time ago they decided to invade Libya, although a formidable stretch of desert stood between their outposts and the nearest Italian military concentration at Fessan. After a 300-mile march across the burning sands the Free French forces under the command of Col. Colonna d'Ornano, grandson of one of Napoleon's marshals, routed the Italian defenders and took possession of the oasis. D'Ornano himself was killed, but his forces moved on to capture a second Italian outpost at Gatrun.

Since these desert spots are hundreds of miles south of Derna, which has now fallen to the British their capture may have little effect on the outcome of the fighting in Libya. But the moral effect of the exploit may nonetheless be significant. Certainly the people of France and the French Empire will hold their heads a little higher as a result of it.

Unattached Statesmen

Wendell Willkie has unceremoniously closed the door upon the latest attempt to install him in a governmental position. A cable from London makes it clear that he is not interested in the proposal that he be nominated for the Congressional seat left vacant by the death of Kenneth F. Simpson. Presumably he wishes to remain free to follow up his interest in public affairs without any official tie.

Many words have been wasted over the lack of official responsibilities under our form of Government for men of ability and leadership who have been defeated in a Presidential election. In Great Britain, critics point out, the leader of the opposition retains a place of influence and power in the House of Commons. In the United States he is just a defeated candidate. Some students of government regard this as an irrational waste of talent, for example, Thomas E. Dewey, who, in a current magazine article, says "we cannot afford to be spendthrift of our brains, experience and ability."

Mr. Dewey proposes an amendment to the Constitution permitting every former President, former Vice President and Presidential nominee receiving the second largest number of votes to become, for life, a United States Senator-at-large. This is an interesting suggestion. However, it seems to grow out of a false premise. It seems to take it for granted that a man of Presidential caliber can make his influence felt only in the halls of Congress. Actually a seat in the Senate which would make a defeated Presidential candidate one of approximately 100 legislators of equal standing might detract from his prestige and influence.

The presence of one recognized leader of the minority party in the Senate might have the effect of unifying that party's legislative policy. But it is difficult to see how Senate membership for three former leaders—Mr. Hoover, Mr. Landon and Mr. Willkie—would contribute to Republican unity! In times like the present, moreover, national unity is far more important than intra-party harmony; and in many instances the presence of the defeated Presidential candidate in the Senate might tend to accentuate partisanship in the legislative process, thus making pursuit of a consistent and well-defined national policy more difficult.

Routine tasks of legislation may well be left to those selected specifically for that purpose. There is, however, an acute need in our system of government for unattached statesmen. It is this unofficial role which former Presidents and defeated Presidential candidates can fill with special effectiveness. It is through their counsel and criticism that they can best serve our democratic system. And no seat in Congress is essential to the successful performance of that task.

Britain's Future

Mark Sullivan, in his column in The Post of January 14, seems to be very much worked up about the possibility of Britain's becoming a Socialist country after the war. He thinks that Congress ought to find out what the chances are in this respect before "underwriting" British victory.

Mr. Sullivan's attitude is amazing for one professing to believe in democracy. Apparently, he is willing to help Britain only if it agrees to retain capitalism. That it is fighting for democracy seems to him to be a secondary and insufficient consideration. Mr. Sullivan, as an intelligent, well-informed person, surely does not believe that capitalism and democracy are synonymous. Furthermore, if Mr. Sullivan would be willing to help Britain only if its economics suit him, then what happens to his old argument that aid to Britain is necessary for our own self-defense?

I do not think it is fair of Mr. Sullivan to attribute to Dorothy Thompson the implication that British workers are willing to defend Britain only if they are assured they will get socialism. The actual situation is that the British people are beginning to realize in ever-increasing number that they can win the war and overthrow Hitlerism only by means of socialism. A successful British invasion of Europe in the foreseeable future appears to be out of the question. A Socialist-democratic revolution in Europe, inspired by a Socialist-democratic Britain is much more likely. The German people will overthrow Hitler if something better is offered them. They will not do so in order to go back to the old status quo in preference to which they submitted to Hitler.

Mr. Sullivan wants Congress to learn whether "authoritative" persons in Britain have the intention of introducing socialism there at the end of the war. As a believer in democracy, Mr. Sullivan should know that whether Britain gets socialism at the end of the war, or before then, does not depend on any "authoritative" person. It depends on the will of the British people. And if we are to aid Britain with arms in the name of democracy, it is important that we not interfere with the democratic process in that or any other country.

ARTHUR FORD.

"Congress . . . Dying"

Since the advent of the New Deal, Congress has been dying and just now needs a blood transfusion of the American type. Never before have the American people been faced with such a brazen demand as that of the lend-lease bill. All powers, not already surrendered by Congress, must be given Roosevelt—our Army, Navy, all of our resources, the lives of our men, our peace of mind and hopes for the future.

Just a few weeks ago he promised the voters that he would keep us out of war. Many, fearful of war, supported him on that pledge alone. They overlooked the fact that many of his solemn promises have been broken, and unless the American people wake up we are going to find ourselves in war, facing conditions far worse than 1917-1918. MRS. E. D. COOKSEY.
Arlington, Va., Jan. 30.

Lindbergh's Vision

The destruction of Warsaw and of Rotterdam and the bombing of London have made no impression on Lindbergh. The reason is not far to seek. Lindbergh has no imagination. Therefore, he cannot visualize what will happen to the United States if England is beaten in this war. This lack of imagination won for him his fame and fortune, for he would not have made his solo flight to Paris if he could have visualized the danger of the flight. And now his lack of imagination is costing him his fame. The American people will not believe anything he said in his testimony to Congress. They want to save England.

America's Record

We are so beautifully inconsistent.

We pity the poor deluded citizens of a totalitarian state who believe that their fatherland is all-good and all-just.

Yet we—enlightened, free, democratic—honestly believe that the United States has always and is always prompted in her dealings with other nations by only the most virtuous motives. For instance, in the "If—" editorial in The Post of January 28, there was this bland sentence:

"We are the only Nation in the world who are moved primarily by our ideals in our relations to other peoples."

Such inconsistency: On one hand condemning excessive nationalism, as exhibited by such countries as Germany and Italy, and on the other hand, encouraging bigoted nationalism on the part of the United States!

Of course, your editorial statement might have been correct. The record, however, would seem to prove otherwise. Consider the dealings of the United States in this continent alone:

The United States went to war against Spain in 1898 after Spain had agreed to an armistice in Cuba preliminary to peace negotiations to be conducted through President McKinley. Spain agreed on April 10, and on April 11, President McKinley asked for war. He gave scant attention to the fact that Spain had capitulated; the American press gave it no notice.

Then in 1902, Theodore Roosevelt boasted "I took Panama." Of course he did it legally. Panama "revolted" from Colombia, who, we thought, wanted too much money for lease of the Isthmus Canal strip. And, of course, the United States in no way inspired the revolt. There are hundreds more similar examples in our history, some of them comparatively recent.

Can we, then, in the United States, sit back and say "Oh, that brutal Hitler," "Oh, such dirty dealings!" "Oh, at least we are pure!"

By all means let us be proud of our Nation! Certainly be glad to be living here! And certainly we should repent of our past sins and try to keep the slate clean in the future.

But let's not promote dangerous nationalism, the same kind of nationalism that has gone amuck in the world today. Let's not say: "We are the only Nation in the world who are moved primarily by our ideals in our relations to other peoples." A. HAVILAND.
Emmitsburg, Md., Feb. 1.

Applauds Stimson

Secretary Stimson should be applauded for his frankness; no other Administration witness before either the Senate or House Foreign Affairs Committee has been willing to discuss the provisions of the lend-lease bill in any detail. His testimony reveals the amazing powers sought in the bill. He agreed with Senator La Follette that a "defense article," which the President may transfer to any foreign government he wishes, might be anything now belonging to or on order for the American armed forces. He did not think the bill conferred power on the President to use the Navy to convoy arms to Britain, but he opposed an amendment to the bill prohibiting the use of convoys. He could envisage the possible need of convoys.

Decisions as to the use of convoys and how much of our defense materials are to be given away should be made by Congress. We are not yet at war; if we now confer powers on the President, the power to decide the issue of war or peace will have passed out of the hands of the elected representatives of the people. ALICE M. MORGAN.
Washington, Jan. 31.

Miss Thompson's "Peace Offensive"

Dorothy Thompson's timely and logical expose of peace aims in The Post of January 31 is a challenge for those who imagine that peace might be obtained and preserved by "fighting it out," those who advise cautious help to England, or those isolationist souls who believe that we can remain at peace simply by concentrating on our own problems without meddling in Europe. I am not going to discuss these three approaches toward total war. What I want to stress is that whatever standpoint we choose it is imperative to be clear on the end part we citizens of this largest and mightiest democracy intend to play in the future. Unless we are actually willing to contribute to the pacification of the world by helping to realize the ways and means of peace, and unless we are ready to pay for its cost, there is really no point in our mixing with world problems, and we may just as well acquiesce, and retreat from the glorious possibilities we have and let the more wakeful and less scrupulous contour the future for us and for Europe.

But since we cannot keep away from fighting (in a direct or indirect way), whether for reasons for defense or out of chivalry to all those who are attacked or abused, we ought to be prepared to stand for the things we lend our support to. Peace aims are, therefore, our most pressing problem, just as they are the gravest quest for any of the countries who are still engaged in the struggle or who went under in it.

Miss Thompson advocates a plan for lasting peace, and she says that it is "compatible both with the historic desire of the European continent to unite and with the freedom and equality of the peoples of Europe with each other, and with the peoples of the British federation of nations, and with the republics of America, North and South." The plan then approximates President Wilson's thesis, enlarged and adapted to a world too complicated to be able to exist within narrow self-sufficient economic and military units.

We have found out by Europe's bitter experience that individual national sovereignty is insufficient protection against total war. Do we realize that we are confronted with the present emergency because of our impatience and lack of vision after the last World War by refusing to enter the League of Nations and the World Court, and by allowing Europe to abandon Wilson's fourteen points? Have we awakened to the fact that this country is the country to lead the others, to help in the execution of tasks and to retain a world of free men? Are we then willing and determined to share their responsibilities of peace as well as the sacrifices, the glory and the spoils of war? Let us not enter the present conflict any deeper unless we have honestly decided to help the warring countries to work out and execute their peace aims, which do correspond to our aims, and are the world's only hope for peace.

Except for my hesitation for an English-speaking federation, I support Miss Thompson's peace offensive in its entirety, and hope that it will receive the attention it deserves, and cause the unification of all men of good will which it inspires. L. M. HANSEN.
Washington, Jan. 31.

Cakes For Colonels

ANTIDO was the perfect cook, though he worried Mrs. Lieut. Spratt. He would allow no woman to enter his private kingdom of the kitchen. Too, he glared at Mrs. Spratt when, in these days of wars and rumors of wars, the lieutenant did not take time to finish his dessert. He seemed to blame her for the problems of national defense. Antido knew no English. Mrs. Lieut. Spratt's only Spanish words were "adios" and "manana." Neither were helpful when talking to a cook, especially when Antido picked up a carving knife and followed her into the living room. Mrs. Spratt fled to the bedroom. Hours passed. The emergency of a wife behind a locked and barricaded door was not discovered until the lieutenant had dealt with many other emergencies. Antido had merely wished to have the carving knife sharpened, but Antido was hard on a newly married Army wife's nerves.

Gracie took his place. Gracie was addicted to dreams that somehow she always made come true. "The chicken is gonna be tough, mam." Dreams must not be circumvented, so the chicken was so tough that at the first stroke of the knife it slipped beneath the dining room table. Lieut. Spratt pursued it. There was nothing else for a soldier to do when his captain was a dinner guest, and no ambitious young lieutenant could surrender before his battery commander.

Rosebud seemed to be the belle of the post. However, there were certain advantages to her popularity. The colonel's orderly would keep Rosebud well informed on regimental affairs. "The regiment is going to the Philippines." The regiment did not go. But Mrs. Spratt had a new summer outfit. "The regiment is going to Alaska." The regiment did not go. Mrs. Spratt, however, had a new fur coat, and she really could not afford both the coat and a change of station.

Something was always happening when Rosebud was in the kitchen. The breakfast toast might be burnt, but it was unimportant compared to Rosebud's whispered news that all the quarters were to be demolished and rebuilt in subterranean depths. A fallen cake was not a tragedy when Rosebud could tell Mrs. Spratt that the colonel's lady wasn't speaking to another colonel's lady. Cause unknown, though Rosebud had a guess. Result was that Mrs. Spratt decided it would be best not to have them to the same luncheon.

Rosebuds, however, do not last forever. A black thundercloud named Marie occupied the kitchen after Mrs. Spratt had spent a 30-day week struggling with the mysteries of recipes. For once, Lieut. Spratt had been of small assistance. He could cook, yes. He had graduated from an Army cooks' and bakers' school. But he could only cook for 100 people. No more and no less. Marie was a temporary maid. Capt. Jones was away. Mrs. Jones wanted to go away, if she could find a home for Marie. "I wouldn't," said Mrs. Jones, "lose Marie for all the gold in Fort Knox." There was a reason. The Spratts learned about the Joneses from Marie. The Army might be one big happy family, but big families, if they live in separate houses, should never exchange cooks. Of course, there were advantages. The lieutenant was forewarned about the captain's ideas on inspections, and ideas can be paramount, where efficiency reports are concerned. There are also disadvantages. Mrs. Spratt can never again speak to Mrs. Jones without blushing.

Wang has excellent references. They are so excellent that Mrs. Spratt isn't quite certain that she dare employ—hire is an improper word to Wang—him. She knows several days later that she made a mistake when Wang turns out to be a literary gentleman.

Somehow the morning paper always has mysterious holes when it finally appears in the living room. Magazines are several days late. All, however, is forgiven when Wang's cakes appear on the table. Now, Lieut. Spratt decides, is the time to impress the colonel. Other Army families may have servant troubles. The Spratts will prove that they understand and follow the great Napoleon's advice about an army's stomach.

This is to be the perfect dinner party. Of course, it presents a few minor difficulties. Chairs must be borrowed from one friend, glasses from another and silverware from still a third. All this rather restricts the guest list. Would it be proper to ask Mrs. Brown for her table cloth, if Mrs. Brown is not invited to eat? Then the menu must be discussed with Wang. "Very nice," is his comment on every suggestion, though the far-away gleam in his eyes suggests that Wang has a few ideas of his own.

This is, Mrs. Spratt decides, the perfect dinner. Gleaming silverware and shining glass adorn the table. Mrs. Spratt trusts that roses have no identifying marks. It's really unfortunate that the colonel's quarters have the only roses on the fort. Again it is fortunate that she is well acquainted with his orderly. The ladies discusss servants. The officers discuss blitzkriegs. The ladies discuss clothes. The officers go into the interesting topic of mail order promotions.

There's a little hush. No, it is not 20 minutes of the hour. Wang appears with a cake. Every party is a birthday to Wang. He has candles and initials made out of candy flowers. Carefully, he has copied the lieutenant's initials from the lieutenant's spoons. Mrs. Spratt gasps. Her Army career is ruined. So is her husband's. Wang has elaborately featured the initials Q. M. C. Now their guests will know that their knives and forks and spoons have been borrowed from the property officer in warehouse three.

The colonel merely smiles. The colonel understands. Wang had once cooked and made a birthday cake for him!

The British-American Connection

LIPPMANN

FOR THE SECOND TIME in our generation the American people are greatly concerned about a war which Britain is fighting, and we very much need to understand why this country should be so deeply involved in the fate of Britain. The accepted doctrines of international law and the usual formulae of American foreign policy do not help us to understand. For while in the theory it is laid down that all foreign powers look alike to us and that with none do we have a special relationship, in practice we do not take this view.

Twice we have proclaimed our neutrality and twice, when Britain was in great peril, we have gone to her support. The question which any sober citizen must ask himself is whether twice we have strayed from the true doctrine under the pressure of propaganda, or whether the doctrine of American indifference to the fate of Britain is not contrary to the real interests and, therefore, to the actual practice of the American Nation. Are we misled by propaganda or are we compelled by realities?

IF 1917 HAD been the first time and 1941 were only the second time we were involved in a great British war, a plausible case might perhaps be made out for the idea that the British-American connection is the work of propagandists. But the fact is that while Americans have quite easily remained neutral in most wars—for example, the Crimean, the Franco-Prussian, the Sino-Japanese, the Russo-Japanese and the Balkan wars—there has never been a great war between Britain and the dominant power of continental Europe in which Americans did not participate. Moreover, there has never been a serious crisis in American foreign relations—the so-called Quasi-War with France, the Louisiana crisis with Napoleon, the War of 1812, the crisis of the Grand Alliance which led to the Monroe Doctrine, the French invasion of Mexico, the Civil War, the Venezuelan affair, the Spanish War, the First World War, the conflict in the Far East and the Pacific, and now the Second World War—in which our relations with Britain, cooperative or antagonistic, were not the paramount and decisive consideration in American foreign policy.

Surely then, there must be something wrong with the theory of our neutral indifference to Britain, and something very superficial in the talk that propagandists have suddenly and recently invented the British-American connection. A relation so profound and so persistent and, in every practical test, so controlling must reflect enduring geographic, historic, and political realities.

IN FACT the relationship is ancient and is deep. Far from its being the work of recent propagandists, the British-American connection is a continual development since the end of the Sixteenth Century—since the defeat of the Spanish Armada gave to English-speaking men the control of the North Atlantic Ocean. For three centuries and a half, since the generation just before the English-speaking settlers began to come to this continent, the ocean between the British Isles and North America had been held by English-speaking men. This has meant that on both sides of the ocean, regardless of political forms, the same kind of civilization established itself, and it has meant that whatever the differences—often very serious—among the English-speaking peoples, their common interest has been so fundamental that they have always stood together against any other power which threatened to invade the North Atlantic world.

The British-American connection was founded about a hundred years after Columbus discovered America—in fact during the reign of Queen Elizabeth—after the triumph of British over Spanish sea power in 1588. Before that victory there was already a great Spanish empire in the Americas extending from Florida to Peru. But there were no English-speaking settlements. They were not begun until 1607 in the generation after the naval victory in the English Channel. Because that naval battle was not lost but was won, the ocean highway was opened to the settlement of Virginia and of Massachusetts Bay by men who spoke English and read the English Bible and adhered to the English common law.

THIS IS THE ORIGIN of the British-American connection—the common control of the North Atlantic which has insured the development of a common civilization in the British Isles and in North America. Ever since this beginning the English-speaking peoples on both shores of the North Atlantic have in the end always stood together to expel other military powers from this region, to defend it against the entrance of any other military power.

Therefore, in every war between Britain and any European power seeking the domination of Europe and of the ocean highways to the rest of the world, Americans have participated. For contrary to the general belief in this country, 1917 was not the first American participation in European affairs; the truth is that there has never been a great British war in Europe, and there have been many, in which America was not involved.

In the Sixteenth Century, as we have seen, the British struggle with Spain decided the very possibility of the settlement of the United States by English-speaking men. In the next century, in the British struggle with Holland it was determined that New York should be New York and not New Amsterdam. Beginning in 1689 and ending in 1815 there were fought a great series of wars between Britain and France which determined that Canada and the Mississippi Valley and New England and the West Indies should belong to the English-speaking peoples. In all those wars Americans participated—in what we call in our history books King William's War, Queen Anne's War, King George's War, the French and Indian Wars, and the Quasi-War with France.

THUS, THOUGH Americans fought the British to win their independence in 1776, though they fought them in 1812, though the two nations have quarreled dangerously over many matters, yet as against all other European powers that have had designs on this hemisphere or upon the control of the North Atlantic Ocean, they have since the beginning of our history stood together. They stood together against Spain from the days of the Armada through the negotiations which led to the Monroe Doctrine to the Spanish-American War of 1898. They stood together against the France of Louis XIV, of Louis XV, of Napoleon I, and, when in 1859 they did not at first stand together, Napoleon III invaded and conquered Mexico. They stood together against the European alliance of Prussia, Russia, Austria and France, against the Central European alliance under the Kaiser William II and now they are again standing together—against the Nazi empire of Adolph Hitler.

Is it conceivable that this history of more than three centuries is the work of clever propagandists and warmongers? Is it not evident that the British-American connection could not be so persistent if it were not always renewed by the compulsion of geography and by the ties of an indissoluble and irreversible history? Can any small and superficial explanation account for the fact that the English-speaking peoples in the North Atlantic, whatever their differences among themselves, have always stood together when there was any serious threat from any other quarter?

WHAT WE SEE today is what the British and the Americans have always in the end been compelled to see—that both must survive and be strong or neither can be truly secure and independent. When the British and the Americans have seen this truth clearly, both have profited immensely; when they have lost sight of it temporarily, they have suffered seriously. They saw the truth clearly in the first phase of Napoleon and we obtained Louisiana. They saw it clearly in the Canning-Rush negotiations and Latin-America was guaranteed its independence. The British did not see it clearly in 1859, and Louis Napoleon was permitted to invade Mexico, they did not at first see it clearly during our Civil War and the British ruling class very nearly connived at the destruction of the union. They saw it clearly in 1898 and stood between us and the intervention of Germany on the side of Spain. In 1917, but only when the situation was grave, we saw that the survival of Britain was an American interest. In 1941 once more, but again slowly, dimly and tardily, we see that the survival of Britain is an American interest.

The testimony of experience is more revealing than abstract theorizing, private wishing, and ancestral prejudice: that testimony is conclusive that the North Atlantic Ocean joins the British Isles and North America in one inseverable system of security. Thus the British are the first line of our defense and we are the final citadel of the British defense against all who invade the ocean which connects the homelands of the English-speaking peoples.

Boycott Threatened

WILLIAM GREEN has issued a threat of a great national boycott by the unions of the American Federation of Labor against the Scripps-Howard Newspapers and, I take it, against all other newspapers which have published revelations of the dishonest and predatory character of many unions and their leadership. An A. F. of L. paper on the coast has uttered a similar threat strongly suggesting that publishers be warned that they stand to lose the bulk of their patronage. And, as reported here before, in Cincinnati a delegation called on the editor of the Post to demand that he suppress the truth about the robbery, persecution and exploitation of working people by union leaders. Three members of this delegation, incidentally, represented rat-infested unions.

These publishers may do as they see fit, but for the first time since this investigation began I am now prepared to say that Green himself is a vulnerable official, and that the step which he now proposes would be as much in his own interest as in the interest of the downright, undisguised crooks whom his boycott would protect. All this time I have been victim of a self-imposed assumption that Green, whatever his natural shortcomings, was a man who meant well and was free of blame.

It seems to me now, however, that the burden of proof has been shifted to Mr. Green and the threat of a boycott, couched in characteristic indirect language which does not disguise its intent, I interpret as the attempt of a worried man to suppress the truth rather than face and answer it. Obviously, if Green and other bosses of the A. F. of L. unions could silence those papers which have exposed the perfidy which has existed under its very eyes and nose without hindrance by William Green, but, indeed, with his connivance, he would not have to give an account of his stewardship to his rank-and-file people or to the United States Congress.

A BOYCOTT—if Green and the frightened racketeer labor press of his group could call a boycott and make it stick—would mean malnutrition if not starvation for the papers in question. About 4,000,000 men, and through their influence millions of other consumers, would not only quit buying these papers—a serious loss of good circulation—but would shun goods and services advertised with two results: (a) That advertising rates would fall in proportion to the loss of circulation and (b) that some advertisers would cease altogether to patronize them. Notwithstanding the declaration of John L. Lewis that he had explored the mind of William Green and was prepared to say that there was nothing in it, I insist that Mr. Green is wily enough to know what a boycott would mean in terms of distress to the papers and of benefit to himself if he could make it stick.

However, I do not believe Green could make a boycott stick, for it is too plainly the threat of a man who has much to conceal and is on the point of asking the very people who have most to gain by the elimination of the negligent or incompetent and, possibly, derelict Green.

Why should it be assumed that Green has been an honest man when it has been shown nor even denied by him that he indorsed two unspeakable crooks, Scalise and Bioff, neither of whom, as he well knew, ever did a decent day's work, and both of whom he had every reason to know were racketeering under the license of charters issued by the A. F. of L.? Can charity be stretched to cover Green's tolerance of the conduct of the Common Laborers' Union when, in his position, he must have known this verminous organization had not given an account of its affairs to its own members over a period of 31 years and, in all that time, had never held a single election of any national officer?

GREEN'S ALARM now, I here suggest, is due to apprehension that further revelations are about to be made wherein he would be dead right for once.

And be it kept in mind that those racketeer publishers of union journals who are now crying boycott are not concerned over labor's gains or the right to organize, from the workers' standpoint, but over their own gains and perquisites and their own right to organize great numbers of helpless victims into units convenient for robbery and exploitation.

Naming A Justice

JUSTICE JAMES C. McREYNOLDS had hardly resigned when Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, led a delegation of Senators to the White House to press the claims of James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, to the newly vacant place on the Court. The President enthusiastically told the Senators that "there was no one he'd rather name than Jimmy Byrnes," and sent them away with the impression the job was Byrnes' for the asking.

It is widely assumed, therefore, that Byrnes will be appointed to the court as soon as the lease-lend bill is safely passed and signed. The President's obligations to Byrnes are very great. Although the extremely influential friends of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson still insist he has the refusal of the justiceship, the President can hardly pass over Byrnes without seriously souring the Congressional situation.

ALSOP

Nevertheless, there are several reasons to suppose that the expected will not happen. In the first place, for all his enthusiasm, the President offered the Senators no commitment. Second, Byrnes is an extraordinarily youthful and energetic man, but at 62 he is two years past the age the President once announced as his limit for appointments to the bench. And third, and much the more important what the President told the Senators was one of those genial half-truths which conceal rather than reveal. there are few men in Washington he owes more to than Byrnes, or likes better, or more enjoys to honor. But from a practical standpoint, as Byrnes is the only really efficient Democratic leader in the Senate, there is probably no one he would less like to remove to another sphere.

FOR THESE REASONS, it is not a bad guess that one of two things may happen. Either the President may name Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley to the bench instead of Byrnes. Thus the road would be cleared for Byrnes to become majority leader himself, and the management of the Senate would vastly improve. Or the President may call in Byrnes (which he has not yet done), tell him what he told the Senatorial delegation, and then plead with him to stay on in the Senate as a great personal favor. Thus, if Byrnes yielded to the plea, the Senate status quo would be preserved and Jackson or some other New Deal choice would inherit McReynolds' robes.

Byrnes' sudden desire to leave the Senate for the court was a sharp surprise to all but his closest friends. He is now one of the five or six most powerful and useful men in the Government. On the court, he would be but one of nine, and the junior of the group at that. But his motives are rather easy to understand.

For all his energy and youthfulness, he is a man of nervous constitution, ill-fitted to carry the double burden of public business and the endless petty tasks of politics. His South Carolina colleague, Senator Ellison D. Smith, makes something of a virtue of his bad relations with the Administration, telling his constituents that he can do them no favors so long as the President is in the White House. Byrnes, on the other hand, is known to stand high, and thus all South Carolina batters daily at his doors, demanding everything from postmasterships and free seeds to housing projects, more CCC camps, and $50,000,000 dams. So long as he is a Senator like any other, he cannot turn a cold shoulder to his neighbors. If he did, the State would ring with the story that "Jimmy Byrnes was getting too big for his britches."

This difficulty would be removed if he were majority leader, for Southern electorates like so well to see their home-team boys make good that they ask no more than the glory. But Byrnes' second problem arises precisely from the fact that he is not majority leader. Barkley, a decent, well-intentioned man, but maladroit in all the arts of legislative management, has the official leader's place, owing to the stupidest political error the President ever made. The President now knows his error, and constantly relies on Byrnes to captain the Senate Democrats in difficult fights. Unfortunately, this not only puts Byrnes in an exceedingly delicate position vis-a-vis Barkley. As he has no great seniority, it also requires him to exercise endless and somewhat exhausting diplomacy in dealing with the Senate committee chairmen and other older men.

SO FAR, Byrnes has succeeded in simultaneously walking on eggs and carrying a heavier responsibility than any other Senator. He enjoys legislative responsibilities more than any other kind, and if his position were regularized no one can doubt he would be delighted to stay on in the Senate. No one can blame him now, however, for wishing to ascend to the bench.

As Justice, Byrnes would start with less legal learning than some of his colleagues. On the other hand, he would enjoy two great advantages, having a brilliant mind, and a rich experience in the practical workings of the Constitution. Practical knowledge is as useful on the modern court as theoretical, and Byrnes' appointment would be far above the average.

KINTNER

The trouble is that while, from an abstract standpoint, he would make a good judge, his removal from the Senate would be little less than tragic in such times as these. The lease-lend bill can hardly be the last great measure that the world situation will bring before Congress. As each issue is presented, time will press, and wise leadership will be urgently required. Barkley, for all his good intentions, cannot help but bumble and fumble. Pat Harrison, while he has returned to harness, will not work hard enough to fill Byrnes' place. Despite the size of the Democratic majority, there is no other Administration Senator who measures up. Thus the President's choice is not so simple, nor his decision so certain, as they have been made to seem.

Answers MinorityReport

REFUTING CHARGES of "dictatorship" leveled at the lease-lend bill by some of its opponents, George Rublee, well-known expert on international law, said yesterday that "The Bill of Rights will still operate. This measure does not add to the powers the President already has as Commander in Chief of the Nation's armed forces, and under which powers he could get us into war today, if he wanted to. Under these powers the President now can commandeer any plant and allot its production of defense materials between the United States and the Allies.

"The principal powers conferred on the President by this bill," Mr. Rublee continued, "are those enabling him to finance allied war purchases in the United States, to release articles of defense to the Allies, and to concentrate under his authority the entire defense-goods production of this country. With this power, the President could coordinate the whole program, ours and the British, and avoid delays growing out of separate and possibly conflicting orders."

Mr. Rublee's statement, released by the Washington office of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, discussed the minority report on the lease-lend bill from the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"I do not agree with the seven-point program set forth in the minority report," said Mr. Rublee.

"First, the two billion dollar credit they propose to grant Britain would be tantamount to our saying, 'We are willing to help you just so much and no more—for a limited period only. We will wait and see how you make out in your life-and-death struggle before committing ourselves any further!' Rather than set a limit to the amount of help we will give, it should be our objective to give all the aid we possibly can. The only limit should be that dictated by our needs, Britain's needs and our capacity to produce. Further, the two billion dollar credit would amount to nothing more than a dollar loan. I am opposed to such a loan, if for no other reason than that we know they cannot repay it in dollars.

"SECOND, it would be difficult for the heads of our Army and Navy to certify to the President that arms proposed for transfer to the Allies are not needed in our defense. They are needed for just that, and in giving them to the British we would be using them for our own defense. That is the purpose of the bill—to defend America by aiding the Allies!

"Third, a one-year time limit on the bill, proposed by the minority report, might cause disastrous delays before Congress could renew the authority, and might have a bad psychological effect on Britain and on our own people and our defense industries. The two-year limitation on the bill, proposed by the majority of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, is reasonable.

"Fourth: there should be no restriction on the transfer or exchange of American naval vessels to Britain. Certain transfer or exchanges might prove vitally necessary in the trying months ahead. We can trust our President not to give away our Navy.

"Fifth, it would be unwise to prohibit the use of our ports and repair bases to the British. If the time should come when their own port facilities were rendered unusable it would be most important for them to be able to fall back on ours.

"Sixth, it is unnecessary to prohibit the use of American vessels to carry war material exports to the belligerents. This question is already covered in the Neutrality Act.

"Seventh, the President has already assured the country he does not intend to use American naval vessels as convoys. He has the power to do so, however, as Commander in chief of the armed forces. I should prefer to leave this power where it is and not try to tie the President's hands. Events make rapid changes in the situation and the power to meet them promptly should exist."

Responsibility Of Lease-Lend Bill

THIS COLUMN is about the lease-lend bill debate, now beginning in Congress. What is here written goes on two assumptions:

SULLIVAN

One is that our people want Britain to have help from the United States, every help short of actual participation by us in the war. Our people want Britain to win this war. Our people feel that by Britain winning, America will be safer, our defense more secure. And our people prefer a world dominated by Britain, detest the thought of a world dominated by Nazi.

The other assumption is that our people should have complete understanding of whatever is done by our Government with respect to the war. We are moving closer to the war. This is inevitable—indeed the truer way to put it would be to say that the war is coming closer and closer to us. In this condition, this column goes upon the assumption that as we get closer to the war, our successive steps should be based on intelligence and understanding—not emotion. This column thinks that much of the unhappiness our people have suffered during 20 years past, and much of the world's present distress, is a sickness of disillusionment. This disillusionment had one main cause—the fact that as we entered the Great War 24 years ago, we proceeded by emotion, rather than informed understanding. Had we been guided by intelligent understanding, we would have entered the Great War with practicable objectives, not with the intangible and impossible objectives that were set up in our minds by relying on slogans and acting upon emotion.

TURN NOW to the present question before Congress. For understanding what the lease-lend bill proposes to do, the change it would bring about—begin by considering the status that now exists.

Britain is now buying war supplies from American manufacturers. This is done with the complete assent of our people and our Government. Our Government approves the process and facilitates it. Not only does our Government further the sale of supplies by our manufacturers to Britain, our Government itself sells or otherwise transfers to Britain supplies owned by our Army and Navy, such as the 50 destroyers. Our Government helps Britain to procure in America every plane, ship and other munitions that we can supply her with, subject only to keeping for ourselves as much as is indispensable for our own armed forces. To this end, our Government cooperates with the British government, the British purchasing program is coordinated with our own armament program.

All this goes on already. To this process recently arose an impediment. The impediment is lack of ready cash on the part of Britain—Britain is coming toward the end of her available financial resources.

For lack of cash on Britain's part, what is the remedy? The remedy is credit—a loan by our Government to the government of Britain. (We would feel better if we made it a gift.) Credit is specifically what Britain asked for. Britain's expressed wish for credit was the beginning of the whole present discussion.

NOT ONLY is a loan (or gift) by our Government the direct answer to Britain's need. It is the simplest way for us to meet that need. It would involve us in no responsibility beyond the act of making the loan. The loan would be a completed act. Thereafter, everything would go on as it now goes on. With the money procured by our loan to her, Britain would buy such supplies as she needs, make such use of them as she deems best. She could use them herself if she chooses. She might turn some over to Greece or to China, or send them elsewhere. Whatever she does with them would be wholly her responsibility. All the future control would be with Britain, all the responsibility would be on Britain. There would be no continuing responsibility on us.

That would be the effect if we made a simple direct loan to Britain. But, by the present proposal in Congress, we do not make a direct loan to Britain. We do something very different.

By the lease-lend bill Congress grants money to the President. With this money the President would buy war supplies. After the President buys the supplies, he will do with them as he sees fit—transfer them to Britain, or China, or Greece, or elsewhere in his discretion. The responsibility would be on him. It would be a continuing responsibility. Daily, so long as the war lasts, the President will make decisions—sending supplies to that nation or area of war he considers best for the winning of the war.

The lease-lend bill is not a single step, as a loan to Britain would be. The lease-lend bill is the beginning of a progression of steps. It puts upon the President a continuing responsibility. It is a responsibility for the duration of the war. It is a partial responsibility for the conduct of the war. It will become a responsibility for winning the war.

It may be the people of the United States are ready to take on this responsibility. Some of our people think we should. Possibly it is desirable we should, even imperative we should. But if we are to take this responsibility, at this time, our people should understand that we are doing it.

Little America Base Evacuated

The Navy announced yesterday that the Little America base of the United States Antartic Service had been evacuated February 1, its equipment and personnel being removed by the expedition ships, Bear and North Star.

With Biologist Jack Perkins aboard, the latter ship then set sail for Discovery Inlet, it was stated, with its objective, the capture of several rare "Emperor" penguins for National Zoological Park here.

The Bear headed for the expedition's East base, 1,400 miles from Little America.

Tapering Waist Needed To Wear New Styles

By Ida Jean Kain

FROM THE signs, the American designers are set to be very hard on the American figure especially the waistline. This middle measurement is the one they are determined to feature. They give us a choice between the broad, closely-fitted waistband and the snug, elongated line from floating rib to hip, or the stark alternative of leaving this region bare!

To wear any of these styles, a slimly tapering waist is an absolute necessity. So long as your waist doesn't exceed 30 inches, it doesn't matter much what it measures. The test is whether it strikes a neat balance with the rest of your figure. It should be at least eight inches less than the bust and about ten inches less than the hips.

If you were a model or a movie star, you wouldn't brag about your figure unless you could show a 10 and 12-inch difference. But, according to the averages, your waist is probably no more than six inches less than the bust with hips in disproportion. Let's not beat around the bush—you need paring down! Considerably.

Depends on Pull

How fast you can come to terms with your waistline depends on one thing: Pull. Pull your waist out slim for ten minutes a day and you can slim off half an inch per week. Here is a waist-pulling routine to start you off:

Stand erect with feet parallel and a few inches apart, and draw yourself up to your full regal height without hunching the shoulders. Have the shoulders relaxed and let the arms dangle limply. Now, keeping the hips still and the shoulders out of movement, bend directly sideward at the waist until the opposite side of the trunk is curved out in an arc. Feel the pull on those muscles? Good! Come back to position, relax, and repeat, bending to the other side. Continue for ten counts, then rest.

Keep Up Exercises

When you are ready to go on, stand on the knees on the floor with the tummy muscles pulled up, the hips rolled down and under—sometimes we refer to this as the "tuck under." It simply means that your trunk is in alignment. Have the knees apart for balance and the arms straight out at sides, shoulders level. Without moving arms at shoulders or elbows, dip sideward and try to touch fingers to floor. Come to position and dip to the other side. Six counts, rest, then take six more.

Now for a real workout of these midriff muscles. Stand on the right knee, left leg thrust straight out at side, foot resting on floor. Stretch both arms overhead and pull, then bend to the left, arcing the right arm overhead, and slide left hand down the outstretched leg. Try to grasp the ankle, and tug. Bring the trunk erect again and while still standing on the right knee, bend to the right until weight is also partially supported on the right hand, left arm arced overhead, and stretch and pull. When you've done that, relax for a moment, then repeat with right leg outstretched, weight on the left.

Foreign Dolls Hard to Get, Says Expert

By Jane Driscoll

THE SPREAD of dictatorship is even affecting the dolls of the world. Doll collectors are finding it increasingly difficult to get dolls from foreign countries, according to Betty McKim, who is in charge of the exhibit of Kimport dolls in a local department store.

"There are a few shipments of dolls on their way from England, Portugal and Lisbon, but it takes so long for them to get here," said Miss McKim. "Those countries, including China and Morocco, would do anything to get their dolls here, because the funds from them help to pay for their refugees."

Collectors, too, are eager for dolls from these unoccupied countries. There are some orders that will never be filled, and collectors wouldn't want the dolls if they were, as Betty McKim explained. Just as soon as Austria was taken over, she said there was no longer any interest in the dolls from that country.

"When the people in a country are suppressed, continued Miss McKim, "collectors do not feel the dolls are authentic. A different philosophy is imposed upon them, and their native crafts are no longer expressed the same way.

Historic Value Seen in Dolls

"These dolls may be the last connecting link between the old native European costumes and those of today. Some day they will be especially important because the native costumes are disappearing as the people are dressing alike."

At present, in this country and in South America, there is a trend toward dolls typical of the sections from which they come. In the Kimport collection there are already 23 States in the Union represented. There is a black-bearded pirate from South Carolina. From Wisconsin comes a cheesemaker and a dairy maid.

There is an educational value connected with these dolls. They stimulate interest in historical events and costumes of the country. Some collectors go so far as to collect flags, stamps and other emblems to add to a doll's history.

Twice Divorced, Woman Is Weighing Advisability Of Third Marriage, to Man Who Dislikes Her Eldest Son, 17, and Doesn't Want to Share Home With Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been twice married and divorced, and am now considering a third marriage. I have three sons, ranging in ages from 7 to 17 years. The youngest boy lives with his father. The other two live with me. The man I am thinking of marrying doesn't like my eldest son and says he should get out and take care of himself. In other words, he wouldn't want him to live with us. He wouldn't mind having the other boy. He has children of his own, by the way, who live in another city with his eldest daughter.

It would be very hard on me to agree to his plan for my eldest boy; and I feel he couldn't really love me and make such a demand; but he assures me that he does love me, and only me. I don't want to make another bad marriage; and I am wondering if I should drop him. I have worked hard to bring up my children. I am very worried over this matter and will appreciate a prompt reply. Sincerely, M. A. C.

DEAR M. A. C.: Your would-be third husband loves nobody so much as himself—and it appears that he would be meanly jealous of anyone who might be capable of meeting him on an equal footing in his own household. I judge that if he succeeds in marrying you, it is his intention to put his foot on your neck and keep it there. No matter how much you may hunger for a husband's companionship, I feel sure it would be a leap from the frying pan into the fire, to marry him. I think you would be bossed, bullied, nagged, harried and perhaps even subjected to downright physical brutality, if you should become his wife.

His premature surrender to involuntary dislike of your son bodes no good. It suggests to me that he resents the boy's tall stature and manly qualities (i. e., sees him as a potential male rival-for-power in the household); and that he is also jealous of your prideful devotion to your first born. Perhaps the lad has been long accustomed to being "the man of the family," (just because he is the eldest), and this fellow senses that he would not submit to being "pushed around."

Of course, it may be that the boy cordially dislikes him,—thus, perhaps, instigating and aggravating his belligerency. But in that case, one is inclined to believe your son is more sincerely interested in preserving your peace of mind than the man is; that he realizes you would be "asking for trouble" and getting yourself into a peck of it, in marrying him; and therefore is doing all he can to break up the match. Even supposing the boy were more of a "problem child" than a "model son,"—this man who wants to marry you is unfit to step into the family picture, in the role of stepfather, so long as his attitude toward the lad is hostile and dictatorial, rather than friendly and judicious.

With regard to his alleged love of you,—"and only you"—the proof of its worthless quality is given in his callous readiness to walk roughshod over your feelings in order to create a domestic set-up that suits himself—and only himself! If he really loved you,— generously, protectively and unselfishly; as you wish to be loved,—and knew your eldest son to be a "tough customer," he would work sympathetically and optimistically with you in coping with, and in trying to correct, the boy's waywardness.

Loving you, he would want you to be happy; would consider it a privilege to contribute to your happiness; and would assume it as part of his husband's responsibilities to play a wise and kindly father's role in the boy's affairs. Since his whole attitude is quite the reverse of this, by all means "drop him." He is preparing to exploit your affection, rather than to deserve it. M. H.

Reader Recommends Book For Spiritually Minded

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We live in a tragic period in history. This is a time of world crisis and challenge. We know that fortitude, wisdom and mercy are traits we must not lose sight of in the days to come. Many hearts in these days are troubled and despairing, filled with fear and foreboding. People are longing for illumination, it seems to me. I hear it said frequently that only a spiritual awakening can save us, as well as the Christian values of our whole civilization.

More and more people are coming to believe that there is no way out of this night time of the soul, this crucifixion of mankind, save by reaffirmation of faith in creative, spiritual forces greater than our human strength. For those of your readers who share this view I would like to recommend a remarkable book of the most profound insight,—"The Creed of Christ," by Gerald Heard.

I have read many religious, mystic, psychological and psychiatric books, but this book seems to contain a greater message for this hour of history than any of them. I would like more people to know about it. It is published by Harpers, and may be found at the Y. W. C. A. book shop, on K Street. A. E. M.

Plan Games For Valentine's Day Parties

Old Dan Cupid gets a field day at the Valentine party! A special sweethearts' version of "Unwind the Spiderweb" is happily pairing off the guests.

With such clever stunts and games you easily make your own party a grand success. For the "Spiderweb" ice-breaker, just turn your room into a giant web by tangling long lengths of string about the furniture, one string to each guest.

Start all strings at one side of the room and let them end at another, marking the ends by trying on red cardboard hearts. Boys pick out their hearts from one side, girls from the other. Then everybody starts unwinding. Such wild suspense as each tries to discover who's on the other end of the string!

Stylists Advocate Twin Hat Styles For Both Sexes

Chicago (AP).—Stylists have come forward with an idea designed to silence those gents who make wry remarks about women's hats.

The gist of the plan is this: The ladies, henceforward, will have the opportunity to wear the same kind of head gear as the men.

For example: If Mr. Poindexter chooses a black homburg a la LaGuardia for the evening, Mrs. Poindexter can don a black homburg a la LaGuardia, too.

Again: If Joe Bangtail wears a gray felt hat with a snap brim for a day at the races, his girl friend can keep sartorial stride simply by wearing a gray felt hat with a snap brim.

The same matching effects, say the designers, can be accomplished with straws, derbies and even silk toppers.

10,000 Attend Meetings Here For Mission

belongs to this generation. We need God to help us discover the deeper meaning of life. We need Him to forgive our sins."

Indicative of the interracial aspect of the National Christian Mission, the Rev. Philip Lee, Chicago Chinese Christian pastor, addressed several hundred colored worshipers at the Vermont Avenue Baptist area mass meeting.

"Today," he said, "the world needs men and women who know truth and dare to live it and proclaim it. In a world at war, people are easily swept to extremes and lose their sense of direction. Can we offer to the world something to bring peace—something more than just force against force?"

Other area meetings were held at McKendree Methodist, Foundry Methodist and Metropolitan Presbyterian Churches. In the last-named place, the appearance of Dr. E. Stanley Jones packed the church auditorium. Crowds were turned away.

"New Responsibility"

More than 500 men and women attended the seminars at Calvary Baptist Church, half of them at the "World Relations" discussion led by Dr. Adolf Keller, the gray-bearded Swiss churchman.

"The church has certainly to discover a new responsibility for world conditions and for peace," he said. Asking if the church has a definite answer to the question of "how to make peace," he assured it had.

"A reconstruction of the world," he declared, "must make a fresh study of the economic forces of the world, in order to avoid the complaints of the 'have-not' nations against the 'have' nations and the conflicts resulting therefrom."

The Rev. Paul W. Yinger, pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, was resource leader.

Weaknesses Seen

In an adjoining seminar on "The Church," the Rev. Roy Burkhart, pastor of the United Brethren Church of Columbus, Ohio, criticized what he called the modern church's weaknesses.

"The trouble with the church is that it is the product of the age rather than a directive and creative force in this age. Another weakness of the Church is that it uses energy to fight what it doesn't want and does little to work with zeal and effective salesmanship for what it believes to be God's way. The Church preaches against dancing and night clubs without offering a substitute.

"It preaches against divorce but does ve y little to give fundamental guidance in self-understanding and sex education and preparation for marriage. It stands by and lets young people make a mess of marriage and then kicks them in the pants for failing. The Church talks about compassion and economic justice but shows very little interest in the individual worker."

Direction Signs Posted for Big Mission Crowds

Calvery Baptist Church at Eighth and H Streets is so large and the crowds are so big at the seminars that "traffic direction" signs have been posted about. Five hundred attended yesterday. One room contains an exhibit of the United States Department of Labor.

Jibe at Roosevelt Brings Laughter

During the "World Relations" discussion at Calvary Baptist Church, Dr. Adolf Keller cited certain state-controlled churches in Europe. He compared that to "the President of the United States appointing a Methodist or Episcopal bishop."

Up spoke a man from the floor: "Don't worry. He will a little later." The audience roared.

Mrs. Philip Lee Is Fred Snite's Nurse

Among the interesting personalities on the mission team are Chinese-born Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lee. She is the nurse to Fred (Iron Lung) Snite, and in previous missions has gone into hospitals to bring the National Christian message to patients. Speaking with her is Dr. Charles T. Holman, authority on religion and health.

Sorry! Henry Is Last but Not Least

Pardon the oversight. In yesterday's sidelights, we mentioned two crack newspapermen handling the mission publicity. We omitted Henry L. Sweinhart, the hard-working publicity chairman for the local mission, and local newspaper correspondent and Baptist publicist. Sorry, Henry.

Capital Audiences Are Quizzical

Dr. Jesse M. Bader, director of the National Mission, said yesterday that most of the mission team members feel that Washington churchmen are the most inquiring group they have found in any previous mission center.

The Rev. J. L. Black Is a Busy Man

The local mission has a "director of transportation." He is the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, paisor of Park View Christian Church. And what a busy man he is! From a special phone and office at the Lee Shrayton Hotel he contacts volunteers to lend cars for conveying the mission speakers to assignments. He has about 100 cars on his list.

"I Talked with God"

(Yes, I Did—Actually and Literally)

and as a result of that little talk with God some ten years ago, a strange Power came into my life. After 42 years of horrible, sickening, dismal failure and despair, everything took on a brighter hue. It's fascinating to talk with God, and it can be done very easily once you learn how. And when you do, well, there will come into your life the same dynamic Power which came into mine: The shackles of defeat which had bound me for years went a-shimmering — and now?—well—I own control of the largest circulating daily newspaper in my County, I own the largest office building in my City, I own my own home which has a lovely pipe-organ in it, and my family are abundantly provided for after I'm gone. And all this has been made possible because one day, ten years ago, I talked with God. Actually and literally talked with God.

You, too, may experience that strange Power which comes from talking with God, and when you do, if there is poverty, unrest, unhappiness, ill-health or despair in your life, well—this same God-Power is able to do for you what it did for me. No matter how useless or helpless your life seems to be—all this can be changed. For this is not a human power I'm talking about—it's a God-Power, and, of course, there can be no limitations to the God-Power, can there? Would you like to know how you too may talk with God? Would you like to know how this Power may come into your life as it came into mine? Then write a letter or post-card to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, Dept. 333, Moscow, Idaho, and full particulars of this Teaching will be sent you free of charge. But write now—while you are in the mood. It only costs one cent to find out, and this might easily be the best one cent you have ever spent. It may sound unbelievable — but it's true or I wouldn't tell you it was. Advt. # WHY BECOME BALD?

Heed these Danger Signals— Avoid the Road to Baldness

BALDNESS can be prevented! When your scalp becomes sick, obvious danger signals such as (1) thinning hair, (2) itching scalp, and (3) dandruff, warn you that a baldness-producing condition exists. You can prevent baldness by heeding these warnings and ridding your scalp of the local causes of hair-loss.

More than a quarter-million persons have avoided baldness by permitting The Thomas' to rid their scalps of local scalp ills. Thomas treatment is based on the sound principle of first determining the exact cause of hair loss and then overcoming that specific cause. Your scalp itch soon ceases, dandruff disappears, abnormal hair-fall stops, and new hair grows on thin and bald spots.

Consult (in private, of course) with a Thomas expert today. He'll examine your scalp—without charge or obligation—and tell you exactly what can be done to help you have a good head of healthy hair.

Bruce Smith Leaves For London This Week

By Hope Ridings Miller

OFF ON SATURDAY to war-torn London will go Bruce Smith, whose trip, long planned, has been delayed time after time, but definitely will be under way by this time next week. Whether he will travel by clipper or by ship, he doesn't yet know; but he has reservations on both, and which he will take depends largely on developments in connection with his work during the next few days.

Hope Ridings Miller

He's going over, as you probably know, as special representative of the American Red Cross, and he will look after erection of the Red Cross-Harvard hospital unit which is being established for research on communicable diseases. In charge of the Harvard part of the project is Dr. John Gordon, who went over about a month ago. How long Mr. Smith will be gone is uncertain. "Probably several weeks," he said yesterday. He hopes, however, to be back within two months.

Mrs. Smith, who will accompany her husband to New York on Thursday, will divide her time between there and Washington during his absence. She will keep her apartment here at the Mayflower.

Since Mr. Smith decided some time ago to make the trip, he and Mrs. Smith have been feted at a continuous series of parties. This evening, they will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given by Mr. and Mrs. John E. McClure. Others in the party will be Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron, the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Daniel Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Palmer and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg.

DROPPING OUT of circulation for a few days (yes, you're right, the "flu" got me, too—even with a doctor right in the house), I find on returning that the social whirl is as speedy as ever and shows few, if any, seasonal signs of slowing down soon. Seems to me there are more parties in the offing than ever before.

Here are just a few—the Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry will gather in a small group for an after-theater party following the premiere of "Queen of Destiny" tonight . . . Mme. Hertelendy will entertain at cocktails this afternoon . . . Col. and Mrs. Kemper Williams will have guests dining with them tonight . . . Dr. and Mrs. H. N. Boon will have a cocktail party tomorrow afternoon, and Clarence Hewes will entertain at dinner tomorrow night. . . . Myron Hofer will be a dinner host on Thursday night and Capt. and Mme. Karl Wessel will entertain at a similar party Saturday night.

A red-letter event on the calendar for a number of Capital physicians is the luncheon to which Dr. Charles Stanley White has issued invitations for Saturday, February 15. Guests of honor will be Dr. Charles Mayo, of Rochester, Minn.; Dr. Paul White and Dr. Thomas Spies.

LOOKING BACKWARD: All day yesterday I heard glowing reports of several parties that enlivened the weekend calendar. There was the tea-time fete that Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft gave on Saturday for Senator and Mrs. Harold H. Burton. I understand it was very gay, fairly large and quite definitely Republican. In fact, you could count on one hand all the Democrats in the crowd. Senator and Mrs. Burton—he's the former mayor of Cleveland, you know—are staying at the Dodge Hotel.

Another afternoon party on the weekend calendar was the reception given on Sunday by Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert at her home, 1028 Vermont Avenue. Government officials, including a sizable number of Army and Navy notables and scores of residentials, were on hand for that party, which was the largest on the Sunday calendar.

Then, too, there was Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron's dinner on Saturday night, and a similar party on Sunday night at which Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed entertained in honor of Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker. And, the whole town seems to be talking about that gala fete Miss Carolyn Nash gave Sunday night in honor of Lily Pons. You'll find a bit more about that elsewhere on this page.

Mrs. R. P. Patterson Is Hostess at Tea For 3 Honorees

Two newcomers to Washington and a visitor from New York shared honors at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, wife of the Undersecretary of War, who entertained at her home, 1545 Thirty-fifth Street.

The feted trio include Mrs. Robert A. Lovett and Mrs. Julius Amberg, whose husbands are special assistants to the Secretary and Undersecretary of War, and Mrs. Montgomery B. Angell, of New York, who has been here for several days.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy; Mrs. Norman M. Littell, wife of the Assistant Attorney General; Mrs. George Marshall, wife of the Army Chief of Staff; Mrs. J. K. Herr, whose husband is Chief of Cavalry; Mrs. Henry H. Arnold, wife of the Chief of the Air Corps, and Mrs. Samuel L. Duryee, wife of the administrative assistant of the United States Engineer's Office.

Capt. Williams Now at Lakehurst

Capt. and Mrs. Robert Hugh Williams, who have until recently been stationed at Quantico, Va., are now at their new post of duty at Lakehurst, N. J., where Capt. Williams is a member of the newly formed Marine Corps parachute unit there.

During the Christmas holidays the Williamses came up to Washington from Virginia and paid an extended visit to Mrs. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman. Mrs. Williams is the former Miss Alice Tuckerman, whose marriage was a brilliant event in Washington a season or so ago.

It's Nice and Warm Where They Are—

—and far from Washington's wintry scene, Miss Eula Mae Grigg, of Gainesville, Ga. (niece of Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, of Washington), and Miss Jane Davis, daughter of Senator James J. Davis, enjoy the swirling surf and tropic sands at the Surf Club in Miami Beach, Fla. Both are the house guests of Mrs. Ward, who is spending the winter at her home on Allison Island, Miami Beach. Mrs. Ward entertained yesterday at a large luncheon at the Surf Club

Mrs. Roosevelt Admits Taking Rumba Lesson—but Only One

The Latin trend has affected even Mrs. Roosevelt—but not for long, she says. At her press conference yesterday the First Lady admitted having taken a rhumba lesson, but only one, with Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury. Long exponents of the square dance, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Morgenthau decided to try out the intricate steps of the rhumba, but found the exercise was negligible. So they probably won't repeat the lesson.

Today will be devoted almost entirely to social duties for Mrs. Roosevelt. She will attend a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Frank Walker, wife of the Postmaster General. This evening the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at the annual Congressional reception. A number of Governors—they are always included in this reception—are expected to attend the party.

This afternoon at 4, Mrs. Roosevelt will be presented with a gold watch by the British American Ambulance Corps at the Carlton Hotel. William V. C. Ruxton, who is flying down from New York City to make the presentation, will be a luncheon guest of Mrs. Walter Tuckerman today at the Carlton.

Tomorrow Mrs. Roosevelt will leave for a short tour. She expects to visit Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges. On Friday she will be in New York City where she will attend the graduation exercises for the nurses at Harlem Hospital. Although Mrs. Roosevelt will return to Washington Saturday, she will be off to Charleston, W. Va., Sunday. A meeting of the Alliance Guidance for Rural Youth will be held at the White House Monday.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau will entertain at a luncheon for Mrs. Roosevelt next Tuesday. The First Lady plans to attend the Congressional Club reception that afternoon as well as the tea at the Goodwill Industries. That evening the Army and Navy reception will wind up the formal receptions at the White House this season.

Van Rechterens To Go to New York This Week

The Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg will leave tomorrow or Thursday for New York where they will bid bon voyage to his sister and brother-in-law, Admiral Baron de Vos van Stenwyk and Baroness de Vos van Steenwyk. They will sail for London Saturday. The Admiral has been serving as chamberlain to Princess Juliana and the Baroness as lady in waiting.

M. Barrois, Mrs. Totten Are Married

At a quiet ceremony at 4 p. m. yesterday at the Church of the Covenant, Mrs. Vicken von Post Totten became the bride of A. Georges Barrois. The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride chose as her wedding costume a simple crepe gown of soft green, fashioned street length. She wore a small brimmed hat and accessories to match. Both she and the bridegroom were unattended.

Handful of Friends Witness Wedding

Only a handful of people attended the ceremony, though about 30 were invited to the reception given afterward by Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong at their Georgetown home. Those at the ceremony included Mr. and Mrs. Strong; Swedish Minister, Wollmar Bostrom, and Mme. Bostrom; the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Folke Wennerberg; the bride's eldest son, George Totton, who came down from his studies at Columbia University to attend the event, and one or two others.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Strong entertained at a dinner in honor of the couple. M. Barrois and his bride will make their home in Washington. The wedding at this time came as a surprise to many of the former Mrs. Totton's friends, as no announcement had been made of the engagement.

Bridegroom Is Professor; She Is Artistic

M. Barrois, who is French, is a professor. The bride is the widow of George Oakley Totton, an architect. She herself is a person of versatility and many talents, and is a painter, sculptor and writer. She first won fame with her porcelain figurines, and later modeled busts of some of Washington's most distinguished men and women. She was commissioned by an architect to do some ceramic friezes recently for an Aztec museum being designed by M. Barrois. Their community of interests led to their marriage. She has two sons, George and Gilbert.

New Envoy Fetes 3 Cuban Fliers At Embassy Party

Completing a flight of over 20,000 miles, three Cubans were the cause of a party yesterday afternoon at the Cuban Embassy, given by the newly arrived Ambassador and Senora de Concheso. Although a small gathering—only members of the embassy staff and a few of the Cuban colony attended—the party gave hint of gayer things to come, for the Ambassador and his wife are extremely affable.

Wearing their uniforms—replete with decorations—the pilot, Juan Rios Montenegro; navigator, Oscar Rivery Ortiz, and mechanic, Francisc, Medina Perez, were the center of attention. While the Cuban fliers sipped their daquiris, their plane was being decorated with the American Flag—making the twenty-first flag to be painted on the ship—as they have stopped in that many countries.

Red and white carnations centered the table where sandwiches, stuffed celery and flaky rolls filled with meat, were displayed. Senora de Concheso wore a black crepe frock with a tiny ruffle down the side.

The Minister Counselor and Senora de Baron were among those who were present. Senora de Baron wore a tiny black hat swathed in veiling dotted here and there with tiny black stars. Another who chose a veiled hat was Senora de Herrer-Arango, who smoked her cigarette with a long holder. A twin scarf of silver fox completed the ensemble of Senora de Munilla, who was accompanied by the Military Attache, Maj. Felipe Munilla. Others there were Senora de Graw, the Misses Maria and Maria Francisca Concepcion and Mrs. Asuncion Eckert.

'Mink-Coat' Set Turns Out For Guild Play at National

Washington's mink-coated contingent turned out in droves last night for the opening of "The Male Animal," the first Theater Guild play at the National Theater in many weeks.

Not all arrived on time. More than half the distinguished persons in the audience slipped into their seats late—which, of course, is an old Washington custom. And if the curtain were set half an hour later and the play began at 9 o'clock, just as many notables probably would be there that much later.

To mention but a few well-known "names" in the audience—there were Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling with a small party; Mrs. Ralph Worthington, swathed in mink; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, who entertained a small party in their box; Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan and the latter's mother, Mrs. Ogilvie Shumate, and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander V. Dye.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Brand were among those present; as were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sims Lee, George Abell escorting Mrs. Robert Pell, and Miss Elsie Ekengren with Gladstone Williams.

Miss Patricia Uline Hill, wearing a luxurious silver fox coat over her evening frock, was seen in the lobby between acts; as were Miss Nancy Hoskinson, the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, and Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell.

Still others in the audience were Mark Lansburgh, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar P. Copeland, Faik Konitza, Mrs. William Livingston Crounse, Mrs. Albert P. Niblack, Miss Betty Boschen with an escort, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Jelleff, Mrs. Price Whitaker, Col. and Mrs. George M. Barnes, Mrs. Lee M. Robinson and many, many more.

Mr. Burt to Wed Margaret Abbe, Of Chevy Chase

Dr. and Mrs. Truman Abbe, of Chevy Chase, announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret, to Donald Burt, of Meriden, Conn., and Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Miss Abbe is president of the Chevy Chase Junior Women's Club and formerly was president of the Washington Elmira College Club. She was associated with the Sidwell Friends School for three years.

Mr. Burt is with the Cuno Engineering Corporation in Meriden.

Plans are being made for the wedding to take place in March.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

WEARING cream colored satin and diamonds, Lily Pons fascinated the 50 people gathered to meet her at a party on Sunday evening. One dazzled young man, with whom she was discussing her interest in doing something to help France, said to her, "You are more valuable than three regiments of artillery."

DUDLEY HARMON

Miss Pons was telling George Abell in French of her enthusiasm for the DeGaulle "Free France" group. She has one sister in Paris, from whom she has not heard a word for several months. Another sister, in Nantes, occasionally gets a letter through.

The striking piece of jewelry Miss Pons wore was a Flato piece, a necklace effect made somewhat like a wreath, with sprays and a stem, all in diamonds. Only a drawing would do full justice to its description. With her at the party was her husband, conductor Andre Kostalanetz. One of his wife's necklaces, incidentally, is fashioned entirely of gold letters spelling out his name. Her hobby is collecting snuffboxes, and she has an assortment of every variety. The furniture in the bedroom of her Connecticut home is just like a child's; it was all made for the tiny singer on a small scale. Miss Pons and her husband are en route to an island off Savannah to rest.

THOUGH you expect anyone named Tamara to be a ballet dancer, Tamara Villard's chief interest is radio work. She recently returned from New York, where she had an audition. The Russian-born wife of Harry Villard, of the State Department, has been appearing in a Government sponsored series of plays broadcast in Washington on Saturday afternoons. Because of her accent, she has been playing foreign parts—so far she has portrayed a German and a Frenchwoman.

The Villards are planning a brief vacation late in February. As yet they haven't been able to make up their minds between Nassau and Sun Valley.

AN April wedding, people are saying, will be that of Stellita Stapleton and George Renchard. The bride-to-be, it's rumored, has already bought a house in Georgetown.

Miss Stapleton and her reported fiance are several thousand miles apart at this moment, she in South America and he in Canada. Mr. Renchard was assigned, several months ago, to our legation in Ottawa, but is due, it's said, to be transferred back to Washington. He formerly shared a house on N Street with Robert Buell and James Penfield, colleagues from the State Department. Mr. Buell is now in Berlin and Mr. Penfield is our first Consul in Greenland.

Stellita sailed last month with her aunt, Mrs. Mae Hamilton, to see the famous carnival in Rio de Janeiro. They went down on the same boat which carried our Ambassador and Mrs. Jefferson Caffery back to their post after a holiday in the United States. An enthusiastic traveler, Miss Stapleton left last summer for Hawaii after tossing a coin to decide on a destination. So the peripatetic life as the wife of a Foreign Service officer will be nothing new to her.

Since the beginning of the war Miss Stapleton has been very active in Red Cross work and is flying back from South America in her haste to take up her duties again.

Self-Help House for Homeless Men Is Dedicated by Mrs. Roosevelt

Self-Help House, 3213 Q Street Northwest, the newest project of the Self-Help Exchange, was dedicated yesterday by Mrs. Roosevlet at a tea there from 2 to 5.

The First Lady commended the plan of providing "a home for men who have no home, where they may pay scrip for their lodging and return at the end of the day to find peace and comfort and loveliness."

"I dedicate this house to the spirit of home for those who have no home," she said.

Officers of the exchange, headed by Hugh V. Keiser, the president, received guests, who were taken through the house. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who is vice president of the exchange, and Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, were among those present.

The house, which was formerly the Jewish Foster Home, was opened in November for men participants of the Self-Help Exchange, as a cooperative enterprise based on the same principles on which the Self-Help Farm near Kensington, Md., and the U Street and Pennsylvania Avenue plants are operated. It started with ten residents. There now are 47, the maximum number that can be accommodated.

Old curtains donated by a local department store have been remade for the windows and old furniture, reupholstered attractively, lends an atmosphere of comfort and home to the library and recreation room. Mattresses, pillows, sheets and pillowcases for the beds have been made at the Self-Help shops and two canary birds, given by Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, sang gayly in the library and office on the first floor.

Men who are participants in the Self-Help Exchange pay for their lodging with scrip earned there and they themselves maintain the house. A committee of three cooperates with the manager in directing it and another committee is in charge of admissions. As soon as a man comes in, an interest is taken in helping him fit himself for a cash job. The fact that he has a comfortable home, a place of address and a telephone helps him in getting one.

Already, 14 men have left to take permanent jobs and others have taken their places. Hard work and gardening will be along the skills men will learn this season on the grounds of Self-Help House.

Yesterday two men in chef's outfits who whipped cream for the hot chocolate and replenished the sandwich plates in the well-equipped kitchen, welcomed opportunity to show the guests all the details of this part of the house.

In the recreation room, where tea was served, were displays of the work done at the Self-Help Exchange, including fine loaves of bread made by a baker who learned his trade at Self-Help. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, the executive director, herself has taught him to make New England oatmeal bread and raisin bread.

Among those who alternated at the tea table were Mrs. Emil Hurja, Miss Susan Craighill, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. May Thompson Evans, Mrs. C. C. Glover, jr., Mrs. Frederick P. H. Siddons, Mrs. Ross Garrett, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Clifford Durr, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mrs. Edward Acheson, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Miss Belle Sherwin, Miss Selma Borchardt and Mrs. Thomas Parran.

Others who assisted were Mrs. Lake Churchill, Mrs. G. A. Gesell, Mrs. John Bagwell, Miss Helen Diggs, Mrs. Frances Northcross, Miss Mary Anderson, Mrs. Herbert Wollner and Mrs. Hugh R. Thomas.

Mrs. Roosevelt is shown in the top picture with Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr. (right) and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, inspecting a dress made at the Self-Help Exchange and on display yesterday at the housewarming of Self-Help House, 3213 Q Street. # D. C. Shoppers To Study Labor And Defense

"Labor and Defense" is the subject for a new study group to be held by the Washington League of Women Shoppers during February. The first meeting will take place today at the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, a sponsor of the league. The topic will be "World War I and Labor," presented by Dr. David Ziskind, principal attorney for the Department of Labor.

The Washington League of Women Shoppers, anxious for the preservation of improvements in labor conditions gained in the past few years, is interested in the controversy aroused over this subject by the defense effort. A study of the relationship of labor and defense, today and in the past, here and elsewhere, is planned as the background for the league's 1941 program.

The four remaining sessions of the study course will cover: February 11, "Labor in Canada and England Today," the speaker to be announced; February 18, "Administration and Labor: Promises and Performance," by I. F. Stone, Washington editor of The Nation and special correspondent for PM; February 25, "Labor's Proposals and Program," by Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer, Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, and March 4, "Proposed Labor Legislation," speaker to be announced.

Church Units Sew for British

When the Harvard Hospital is set up near Salisbury, England, members of the All Souls' Episcopal Church in Chevy Chase will have cause for pride. Three hundred pairs of curtains, including draperies, scrim curtains and blackout curtains for use in the entirely prefabricated and American made hospital have been the work of the American Red Cross unit of the church, combined with that of the Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church.

Mrs. John D. Northrop, chairman, is gratified with the manner in which the ladies of her church, those of the Blessed Sacrament and members of churches of several denominations have worked together on this project, forming a neighborhood rather than a church unit.

The 22 hospital buildings will be set up, equipped and ready for use 48 hours after arrival in England. Set 6 feet inside each door will be blackout curtains so arranged as to permit a stretcher to be brought through the outer entrance and the door closed behind it without allowing a ray of light to escape. The curtains have been treated by a chemical process known as delighting and, according to Mrs. Northrop, have been of especial interest to the women who have made them under the direction of the Red Cross.

Dupont Group Approves Plan To Restrict Commercial Building

SPEAKER, PRESIDENT GET HEADS TOGETHER—A. L. Leisenring (left), president of the Dupont Citizens Association, confers with the Rev. Dr. A. J. McCartney, who addressed the group yesterday at a meeting in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower Hotel

The Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday urged passage of the Shipstead bill amendment asking approval by the Fine Arts Commission of plans for any structure facing or abutting churches, schools and parks in specified downtown areas.

The resolution was passed after Dr. A. J. McCartney, pastor of the Covenant First Presbyterian Church, had denounced new structures near churches in the Dupont Circle area, and suggested the amendment as a practical way to prevent other such commercial building.

Suggestions by Chairman William Taylor of the public utilities committee that Army troops be used to police Washington streets to cut the traffic fatality rate, that taxi meters be reinstalled and that District residents vote for the District Commissioners were referred to committees for further study.

Share World Responsibility, Women Are Urged at Forum

Urging women to shoulder their share of responsibility for the way the world is going, Muriel Lester, internationally known social worker of London, decried complacency in an address to several hundred at a Woman's Christian Life Forum yesterday.

"It's easier to go on cooking church dinners and collecting money than grappling with the problems that face the world today," Miss Lester said.

At Foundry Methodist Church, she spoke to one of the six simultaneous forums for women, held at various churches in connection with the National Christian Mission.

Miss Lester challenged the opposition to the United States' feeding of hungry people in conquered European countries.

Favor Food Shipments

"Never before have church leaders campaigned against feeding hungry children," she said. "Someone has said, 'Every starving child in Europe is an asset to Britain.' That was said by a leading churchman in this country."

During the brief question-and-answer period, she was asked: "How can we feed the hungry without feeding the Germans?" She gave as an example the feeding of Polish people by outside aid, with none of it having been diverted, she said. If the feeding plan were tried on a large scale in Europe, and Germany did begin seizing supplies, the blockade could be clamped on again instantaneously; with little lost, she asserted.

Discussing the plight of China, she said that "our hands are crimson with China's blood" because Japan's war couldn't be carried on "except for British and American help." She added, "in some parts of the world, we are looked upon as perfect hypocrites, because we say we love China."

Miss Lester urged her listeners to begin a personal discipline—to sacrifice on meal a week to let the money go to a relief fund for starving people, to let no day pass without reading from the Gospels, to carry out Christ's teachings even though it means facing the question—"How soon will I lose my popularity, my freedom, perhaps even my life?"

Bishop Decries "Wanderers"

Mrs. William L. Clarke, of Foundry Methodist Church, led the devotional service. Mrs. O. B. Atwood, vice president of the Washington Council of Churchwomen, presided.

Bishop Thomas C. Darst, of Wilmington, N. C., Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina, said at the women's forum at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church:

"Why should we who have wandered far from God return to Him? The answer is, not simply to save ourselves . . . but rather to join forces with God in saving the world. He has a tremendous job on His hands and we are giving Him mighty little help. He is dealing with devilish dynamic powers, and we are chiefly concerned with financial security."

Miss Rice Makes Address

Miss Anna V. Rice, of New York City, former general secretary of the International Y. W. C. A., said at the women's forum at Vermont Avenue Baptist Church:

"We need to recognize that God works not only in the individual souls of men and women but in the great movements of history. We need to recognize in the chaos and confusion of today His judgment upon many things which have characterized the civilization of every country including our own; but the Christian must also recognize that God is the Redeemer of mankind, and must place himself in God's hands to become the instrument of His redemption in these days of tragedy."

Dr. Jones Asks Aid For World Needy In Mission Talk

Challenging his listeners to be participants rather than "spectators" in the Kingdom of God, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, noted missionary, yesterday addressed more than 1,000 persons at a noon meeting of the National Christian Mission at the Church of the Epiphany.

"Here in this world tragedy, what can we do other than ask for a spectators seat?" he asked rhetorically. "We can feed the starving," he answered. "We can say that we cannot sit on the sidelines and see a world starve."

Then he mentioned the work of the Friends' committee which "has rushed into these areas of need."

"We can be more conscious of the needs of others around us," Dr. Jones added. "The lowest forms of life are sensitive to themselves only. You can judge how far you have risen in the scale by asking yourself, 'How lightly or how deeply do I feel, and does that feeling drive me to action?' The Christian is the person who has been sensitized on a world scale."

5-Power Customs Union to Be Studied

Montevideo, Feb. 3 (U.P.).—A Uruguayan proposal that the River Plate regional economic conference study the creation of a five-power customs union was adopted tonight by the conference finance and economic committee.

The Uruguayan proposal, similar in substance to a draft convention submitted by the Argentines, will be acted upon at the plenary session of the conference on Wednesday or Thursday.

Pastor Gets Dates for His Parish Girls

When a girl member of his congregation approaches Dr. Roy A. Burkhart, Columbus, Ohio, pastor, and says "I'm just bursting for a date" he sees that she gets one.

In his First Community Church, embracing 27 denominations and where no member is unemployed, there are what amount to committees, which at the young pastor's behest, see that unhappy, dateless girls are accommodated; that domestic affairs of members are repaired; that the unemployed are put to work.

Dr. Burkhart, who trained as a psychologist, also has a behavior clinic for his flock.

Attending the National Christian Mission here, he spoke of his church yesterday to the Newcomers Club at the Carlton Hotel.

Much emphasis was laid on wives making satisfactory financial adjustments toward the creation of happy homes, and the "disinterested, defeatist attitude on part of many ministers," Dr. Burkhart deplored.

He had sought to get down to the bedrock of his congregation's personal, individual difficulties, he said, and was rewarded by a growing congregation and interest in his church. Last year, he reported as one such undertaking, he cured 23 alcoholics.

As another example, a girl inquired if it were proper to kiss a boy and said she required an answer by the forthcoming Sunday. Dr. Burkhart, however, did not report his answer. "There is so little opportunity for them to get objective help," said Dr. Burkhart, commenting that a great idealism now is growing in the high schools, "a desire to fulfill oneself and find fulfillment in a great love."

"I wonder what the Army will do with this young idealism?" he asked. It must be reckoned with to get best results from youth, he said. Hitler recognized that idealism "and they will die like flies for him." It accounts for some of his successes, he said. Too many churches, he said, are satisfied simply with a Sunday service.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur ("Bugs") Baer.

Well, the midwestern Republicans can't give Willkie a drumhead court-martial and expect him to pay the fiddler.

Wendell is accused of following the old backwoods formula, "If you can't beat 'em, jine 'em."

Willkie jined 'em. And the problem for the next White House dinner will be how to seat the lads without Mr. Wallace being forced to eat at the second table.

Eleven Middle Western States have written the preamble to an important resignation. Now, they are wondering how Wendell ever managed to crash the party.

Ten of the 11 States that went for Wendell in November went against him in February. Which just about gives Franklin D. the entire Electoral College and the football stadium, too.

Adm. Peoples Dies; Headed U.S. Purchasing

Rear Admiral Christian Joy Peoples, U. S. N., retired, who centralized virtually all Government nonmilitary buying and spent billions in relief funds as head of the Treasury Procurement Division, died here yesterday.

The veteran naval officer, a special representative of the Todd Shipbuilding Corporation since his retirement from the Government service last November, died at the Naval Hospital, where he had been ill of pneumonia for several days.

Since World War days, Admiral Peoples has been regarded as a leading expert on purchasing and supplies and was drafted by President Roosevelt back in 1933 to consolidate Government buying and handle New Deal spending.

Born in Creston, Iowa, October 17, 1878, Peoples won a competitive appointment as an ensign in the Navy Supply Corps in 1900. For his service as assistant chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts during the World War, he was promoted to rear admiral and awarded the Navy Cross.

After the war, he served as general inspector of West Coast supply activities and commander of the Brooklyn supply base. He became paymaster general and chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts April 29, 1933, and director of procurement, Treasury Department, the following November. After handling both jobs for two years, he was relieved of his naval assignment and served as Treasury procurement director until October, 1939, when he became general inspector of Navy supply activities on the Pacific Coast.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Leila Peoples, and two daughters, Mrs. Homer B. Wheeler, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Wheeler, and Mrs. Jacob T. Bullen, wife of Lieut. (J. G.) Bullen. Funeral arrangements will be announced today.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a son and daughter, Frank S. Lerch, jr., and Mrs. Edna L. Gobeile, both of Washington.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

U. S. Doesn't Own REA Home Federal Funds Built

The ultramodern Longfellow Building, the new home of Rural Electrification Administration at Connecticut and Rhode Island Avenues, was financed mainly with Federal funds, but Uncle Sam doesn't own the structure. In fact, the Government has had to lease the building at a rental of $180,000 annually. Estimated cost is $2,000,000. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation put up $1,500,000. The balance was paid by the National Home Library Foundation and the Mount Vernon Mortgage Corporation, co-builders. Financing of the Longfellow Building was somewhat similar to that of the Lafayette Building, home of RFC. RFC loaned money for construction to a private firm and then rented the structure from the promoters.

However, no individuals stand to benefit at the expense of Uncle Sam by construction of the Longfellow Building. The library foundation is a nonprofit institution. Income from the building according to Sherman F. Mittell, editor and executive head of the foundation, will be used to expand its adult education program which is the publishing and distribution of books on a nonprofit basis.

An interesting angle on the building is the fact that the building could have been leased to private concerns at much larger rentals. A drug store offered $6 a foot and a department store $5 a foot for the first floor. Uncle Sam pays about $1.57 a foot for the entire building. The Government pays $2.50 a foot for space in private office buildings here which aren't air-conditioned or sound-proofed like the Longfellow Building.

The building was built especially for REA. It was conceived five years ago shortly after REA was created, when a suitable building couldn't be found to house all the agencies functions. REA was scattered in nine different buildings up until last week when it moved into the Longfellow Building. Mittell is a former REA consultant. Harry Slattery, REA administrator, recently wrote a history of REA, "Rural America Lights Up," which was published by the library foundation.

On the library advisory board are many famous Americans such as Senator Arthur Capper, James Truslow Adams, Charles A. Beard, David Cushman Coyle, Frederic A. Delano, Jerome Frank, Roscoe Pound, William Allen White, Bennett A. Cerf and many more.

Employes Issue Paper

Treasury's Procurement Division yesterday issued its first edition of The Schedule, a neat employe publication. The paper carried the following jingle which was called to the attention of employes in the strategic materials division:

Ships or plans or troop positions
KEEP IT DARK
Lives are lost through conversation
Here's a tip for the duration
When you've private information

The paper pointed out that "activities of the section involve the transfer from other continents to the United States of materials essential to the national defense. Idle conversation," it warned, "might seriously hamper such movements."

Keech Opens Traffic Court Investigation

Checks on Aides In Surprise Visit; 176 Cases Found Pending for Year

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech yesterday began his inquiry into local methods of prosecuting traffic offenders with a personal, unannounced visit to his Police Court office.

As he arrived during the peak of morning business to observe activities of his assistants, it was learned at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic that a total of 176 major traffic cases—some pending for nearly a year—remain untried on Police Court dockets.

Records at the Traffic Department showed that 111 cases of driving while drunk, 32 hit-and-run and 33 reckless driving are pending for trial by juries. In numerous instances, it was disclosed, motorists under bond awaiting long-delayed trials previously had been convicted of charges ranging from third-offense speed to reckless driving.

In at least four pending cases of driving while drunk, the accused motorists were driving on permits which had been suspended (but were later restored) for other flagrant offenses.

To Check for Laxity

In his probe of conditions at the Police Court office—prompted by The Post stories showing instances where charges were altered or modified by his assistants—Corporation Counsel Keech has promised to delve deeply into all pending cases for evidence of laxity in prosecution.

He watched for more than an hour yesterday while his assistants handled cases and announced he would return again this week for additional observations and conferences.

Hinting at possible changes in procedure, Keech said one of his major aims will be to place an assistant in direct supervision of the office. Heretofore, the assistant prosecutors have worked independently of one another with no one man assigned to shoulder responsibility.

An explanation of one drunk-driving case pending since the motorist was arrested, June 16, is being sought by Traffic Department authorities. The charge was nolle prossed by an assistant corporation counsel.

Case to Be Discussed

A written statement made by the arresting officer said the accused driver spoke "incoherently" and demanded to be "locked up." He had a record of two previous arrests for speeding.

The case, which only recently came to the attention of traffic officials, is expected to be discussed today by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Keech.

Another drunken driving case has been on the traffic records since March 2 without disposition. There are two others dating back to March, two to May and two each to June and July.

"I want to know everything that is going on," Keech said in announcing his intentions to conduct personally the current investigation. "I consider the Police Court office one of the most important branches of my division—and I want it to be operated properly and above reproach."

Law Would Require Building Parking Space

Enactment of a law requiring underground or roof garage space for all new apartments, office buildings and theaters was proposed yesterday by Chairman Schulte of the House Subcommittee on District Traffic, as he scheduled another hearing for 7:45 p. m. tomorrow.

Schulte said such a law would relieve traffic congestion and reduce casualties by taking cars off the streets.

A similar proposal was made several weeks ago by Chairman Reynolds of the Senate District Committee, who said he had noted that theaters and public buildings provided underground parking space in South American cities which he visited recently.

Schulte plans to hear Police Court judges, police officials and representatives of the American Automobile Association tomorrow night.

TICKET-Fixing Drops; Only 73 in Week

The traffic "fixing" business showed a slight slump last week as only 73 adjustments were made, according to figures released yesterday by police.

The list included 60 warning and 13 cancellations. Two persons escaped through plea of diplomatic immunity. Four doctors were let off with warnings when they explained they were answering emergency calls at the time the violations were committed.

Hears Crash, Driver Figures in Another

A freak accident yesterday brought injury to a pedestrian who turned about as he heard the crash of a two-car collision.

The accident occurred at Seventh and R Streets Northwest, where a coal truck operated by Clarence Mayfield, 21, colored, of 1207 Sixth Street Northwest, according to police, collided with a light coupe operated by Donald Whorton, 35, of 4625 Fourth Street Northwest.

The light coupe was hurled by the impact to the opposite side of the street, where it struck the pedestrian, Eugene Scott, 67, colored, of 719 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest—then crashed into a fire alarm box, which was bent into U shape although the alarm was not sounded.

Scott was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a fractured right leg. Neither of the drivers was injured. The coupe was demolished.

Blood Bank Aids All D. C. Hospitals

through its bank has served scores of patients in other Washington hospitals. This has eliminated long delays which attend the old system of calling for donors and typing their blood.

These delays were everyday occurrences at Children's before the blood, plasma and serum bank was established with funds raised by the first campaign in 1939. Emergency transfusions that meant the difference between life and death not only were deferred, but the confusion incident to calling for donors, receiving them at the hospital, and typing as many as 15 or 20 persons for a single case, disrupted the institution's quiet, orderly routine.

With the introduction of the blood bank, in which blood is stored for future use, rapid administrations of blood and systematic scheduling of days when donors make their contributions are now regular procedure.

Money raised in the blood bank campaign, sponsored by The Washington Post, WJSV and the American Legion, with the American Contract Bridge League as national sponsor, is expended for salaries of the bank's technicians and for equipment, supplies, serums and vaccines.

Seldom is it necessary to buy the blood itself, which is furnished by volunteer donors. Occasionally, however, the fund is used for purchase of convalescent serum, which is prepared from blood of persons who have recovered from meningitis, infantile paralysis or some other infection.

Washingtonians and suburbanites who would like to give or help sponsor benefit parties may obtain tickets by writing the Blood Bank Editor, care of The Post, or coming in person to the office of this newspaper at Fourteenth and the Avenue.

St. Valentine's Day is the theme day of the campaign but the benefits may be held anytime during February.

Citizens' Unit Asks Better Bus Service Without Fare Boost

Members of the Manor Park Citizens Association, after two hours of proposals and counter-proposals, last night strongly urged that bus service to the Manor Park-Takoma area be increased and denounced suggested fare increases for improved express bus service.

Chairman George A. Corbin reported that a larger number of buses had been offered by the Capital Transit Co. if riders agree to a tokenless straight 10-cent fare on express buses. To this the association objected.

Another resolution denounced the proposed rerouting of some buses of the present Sixteenth Street route to Thirteenth Street Northwest, stating that the latter street is already a "traffic bottleneck."

The citizens directed their tax committee, headed by W. H. Seaquist, to study the status of tax-exempt property in the District and report at the next meeting. They also reiterated their backing of the proposed cross-town bus and their choice of the Military Road route for the new service.

An Industrial Union Council committee will confer tomorrow afternoon with Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, director of District Selective Service, in a move to obtain uniformity of action among the area Selective Service Boards.

Announcement of the conference was made last night at a meeting of the Industrial Union Council, local Congress of Industrial Organizations assembly. The parley will consider deferment for married men, efficiency of advisers, and labor representation.

In a number of resolutions the I. U. C. criticized the Alley Dwelling Authority for housing segregation and urged voluntary mixed housing projects; protested alleged dismissal of colored workers by the Census Bureau; indorsed the House bill to set up automatic salary increases for Government workers; called on Miss Harriet Elliott, defense commissioner in charge of consumers problems, to seek a withdrawal of recent rent increases at Buckingham development in Arlington County.

A.F.L. Group Weighs Safety Board Plan

The legislative committee of the Central Labor Union, American Federation of Labor central body here, last night took under consideration a proposed bill to create an accident prevention board in the District, with power to enforce safety laws.

The bill was proposed by Willy Arnheim, business agent for the Road, Highway and Heavy Construction Laborers Union, as a result of a number of accidents within the past year on construction jobs within the city.

Navy's Arlington Radio Towers to Come Down

The Navy yesterday let a contract of $1 for the removal of the lofty towers of its Arlington, Va., radio station, a notable feature of the city's sky line for more than a quarter of a century. The towers cost the Navy $116,000 in 1917.

The Long Island Machinery & Equipment Co. contracted to remove the towers for $1 if it could have them for scrap. Removal will start in a few days and take about ten weeks.

Kenilworth

Charles M. Maize was elected to his fourth term as president of the Kenilworth Citizens Association last night, while Mrs. Mabel M. Hubbell was chosen secretary for the seventh consecutive time. Charles McCall, vice president for the last two years, also was reelected.

The association went on record favoring the use of traffic fine funds to pay for the proposed addition of 100 men to the police force. The resolution was introduced by Walter Barnes.

Jack Alexander will be chairman of the association's participation in the Metropolitan Police Boys Club fund drive. The association extended congratulations to Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, on his appointment as chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Citizens' Unit Of Takoma Hears Kelly

Police Inspector Urges Safety Steps To Combat D. C. Traffic Deaths

Police Inspector Edward J. Kelly last night called on Washington citizens to "talk safety, act safety and ask all of your friends to practice safety on the streets," in an effort to combat the District's mounting traffic fatality rate.

Speaking at the fifth annual banquet of the Citizens Association of Takoma, Kelly urged safety educational programs among civic groups and churches as the most effective way of meeting the "terrible increase in traffic deaths."

He also cited the need for more police to enforce traffic regulations, but pointed out that most of last month's 13 traffic deaths were caused by carelessness rather than infraction of rules.

The Takoma citizens voted to oppose tentative changes in the District zoning law permitting commercial parking spaces on vacant lots in residential areas. They backed the pending Overton bill for increased Feleral appropriations to the District and the Sumner resolution permitting Congress to give Washington national suffrage.

President Wallace Magathan and Program Chairman F. E. Staebner presided jointly at the anniversary meeting.

Progressive-Georgetown

Methods of combatting Washington's traffic problems on three fronts were suggested last night by Inspector Arthur E. Miller at the regular meeting of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown.

Inspector Miller urged:

1. An "educational director" to keep the public informed of traffic regulations and hazards.

2. The services of one or two part-time junior chemists from the Health Department to analyze cases of drunken drivers if a test case soon to appear in Police Court proves the validity of chemical evidence.

3. A "cafeteria court" whereby traffic offenders pleading guilty might forfeit collateral and save the appearance of the arresting policeman in court. Police must take many hours off duty to appear in court, Inspector Miller said.

The association went on record in favor of 100 additional police; an investigation of the District traffic light system, and mandatory jail sentences for driving while drunk, driving at excessive speeds, and for reckless driving. The group met at the Curtis School.

Forest Hills

The Forest Hills Citizens Association last night opposed the closing of Van Ness Street Northwest through the Bureau of Standards Grounds.

The bureau asked recently that the street be closed to lessen the danger of sabotage.

Meeting at the Ben W. Murch School, the association adopted a resolutions urging the bureau to construct an overpass between the buildings. The group said it would not withdraw its opposition unless it could be demonstrated that this would not achieve the objectives of the bureau.

The association also discussed the closing of Virginia Avenue and several criticisms were made of the project. No formal action was taken after officers declared that any action would be futile.

Other resolutions adopted urged selection of the Porter Street route for the proposed Northwest crosstown bus, called for the use of photographs on drivers' permits, and recommended physical examinations for renewals of drivers' permits.

Metropolis View

A novelty program in which speakers were heard twice—once in person and later from recordings made during their talks—was staged last night at the Metropolis View Citizens Association's meeting in Crosby Noyes School, 2700 block Tenth Street Northeast.

The records then were presented to the speakers as souvenirs. Speakers were Harry Stull, president, and Harry Wender, vice president, of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney for the District; Police Capt. Oscar J. Letterman, of the Twelfth Precinct, and Miss Grace Bush, principal of the Noyes School. Recordings of talks by Arthur Driscoll, Mid-City Citizens Association president, and James Crooks, secretary of the North Capitol Association, unable to be present, were played.

Resolutions were adopted favoring 100 additional policemen as a traffic safety measure and establishment of either of the two crosstown bus routes proposed by other associations.

Century-Old, New Pieces Accent Agriculture Orchestra Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra Monday night in South Building Auditorium. Soloists: Wilhelmina Amiss, Grace Powell, Miriam Buchalter and Cecilia Mahoney. Program: In Bohemia (Hadley), Elegy (Palmer), Symphonie Concertante with fuor solo violins (Maurer), Symphony No. 2 in B minor (Borodin).

At last evening's concert by the Department of Agriculture, two novellies maintained Dr. Walter Bauer's avowed intention to keep his programs from hardening in the molds of convention. One of the compositions, Maurer's quadruple violin concerto, was more than a century old, while the other, an "Elegy" by the 15-year-old David C. Palmer, of this city, was recently completed and received its first performance. The soloists in the revived "Symphonie Concertante," as the composer designated it, were members of the orchestra: Wilhelmina Amiss, Grace Powell, Miriam Buchalter and Cecilia Mahoney.

BROWN

Ludwig Wilhelm Maurer was a Prussian violinist of considerable distinction who spent part of his long and active life in Dresden and part in St. Petersburg, where he died at the age of 89. He wrote four operas, nine violin concertos including the quadruple and double concerto, two string quartets and violin pieces too numerous to mention. Being a virtuoso himself, he wrote extremely well for his instrument, although his style is now as definitely dated as Charles Lever's novels.

The burden of performance in the quadruple concerto falls on the soloists, who play what is virtually a three-movement string quartet with a light orchestral accompaniment. The work contains one feature which is indeed rarely heard, a quadrilateral cadenza, which has some interesting technical problems. The soloists on this occasion acquitted themselves with honor, and were duly rewarded by the auditors.

David C. Palmer was recently heard in a piano recital at which he played several of his compositions. The "Elegy," written in affectionate memory of his friend, the late Carl Droop, is his first essay in a large form. Scored for string orchestra, it shows an apprentice hand in the simplicity of the harmonic procedure, but it reveals a promising talent for expressive melodic writing. The music is sincerely felt and eloquently projected.

Dr. Bauer opened the concert with Henry K. Hadley's spirited overture, "In Bohemia," which refers not to the geographical locality but to the Bohemian Club of San Francisco. Like all his music, it is skilfully instrumented for effective harmonic color, and its mood is that of conviviality. For the latter half of the program Dr. Bauer chose Borodin's B minor symphony, a work which emphasizes the Asiatic strain in Russian music. The concert will be repeated Wednesday night, and can be enjoyed without charge by as many as the auditorium will hold.

A high mark of the season's musical tide was attained yesterday morning by the joint recital of Rudolf Serkin and Emanuel Feuermann in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. Both the Bohemian pianist and the Austrian violoncellist are preeminent among contemporary artists, and their collaboration was in itself an unusual event esthetically profitable to the auditors. Their association was not only the ordinary one of two soloists appearing on the same program but also the extraordinary one of a Serkin-Feuermann reading of music composed for just such an ideal combination.

It was in consentient interpretation of the most delightful kind that the admirable musicians opened and closed the program. The first work of their choice was Beethoven's variations on "Bei Maennern welche Liebe fuehlen," the duet between Pamina and Papageno in Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and the second was the A minor sonata written in 1824 by Schubert for piano and arpeggione, the six-stringed viol also known as the guitar-violoncello. The performance of these compositions was a model of cooperative skill in balancing the timbers of the instruments, and the agreement in the subtleties of phrasing.

Mr. Feuermann, who wears his virtuosity with an ease that makes it seem of no consequence, was assisted by Albert Hirsh in his solo group, which contained a transcription of Gabriel Faure's lovely song, "Apres un reve;" a minuet by Valensin and Chopin's Opus 3, the "Introduction et Polonaise Brillante."

Mr. Serkin, whose technical fluency seems to the onlooker as natural as breathing, devoted his solo appearance first of all to a revivification of Mendelssohn's "Rondo Capriccioso" which restored its pristine sparkle.

Tuberculosis Group's Board Urged to Quit

The resignation of the entire board of directors of the District Tuberculosis Association was urged yesterday by Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the tuberculosis bureau of the District Health Department.

He declared that the present directors of the association tend to heed the advice of laymen rather than the suggestions of tuberculosis specialists in fighting the disease.

The resignations should take place before a special committee studying reorganization of the association completes its report, he said. Ross Garrett, head of the District Health Security Administration, is chairman of the special committee. Dr. Watson Eldridge, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, and Willard Smith are its other two members.

Dr. Coulter charges that the association had failed to aid the Health Department in X-raying prospective army selects. Kendall Emerson, managing director of the National Tuberculosis Association, has requested the cooperation of all local groups throughout the country in aiding in physical examination of selects, Dr. Coulter added.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, the association's managing director, confined with an attack of influenza last night, was unable to make any reply to Dr. Coulter's statements.

The Warner Brothers Do Their Canning Early

As Many Films in Work as Heinz Has Pickles; Miss Cornell Busy Rehearsing Shaw Comedy; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE WARNER BROTHERS evidently believe in preparedness for themselves as well as for national defense. Having plaqued their theaters with the emblem of full cooperation with the United States Government in this time of emergency, they now placard the drama desks with the information that they have 13 pictures ready for release or in the cutting room, eight shooting, four scheduled to start this week and 35 being written. And no bottlenecks!

BELL

First for release will be Frank Capra's "Meet John Doe," costarring Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck; "Honeymoon for Three," with George Brent and Ann Sheridan; Humphrey Bogart and Ida Lupino in "High Sierra;" "The Wagons Roll at Night," with Bogart, Sylvia Sidney, Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie; George Brent and Mary Astor in "The Great Lie;" "Strawberry Blonde," "Footsteps in the Dark," "Father's Son," "The Case of the Black Parrot, "Murder on the Second Floor," "Knockout" and "Here Comes Happiness," the last two of which seem not to go together too well.

In production are "The Sea Wolf," starring Edward G. Robinson in the role originally played in the silents by Hobart Bosworth; "Winged Victory," "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America," "She Stayed Kissed," "Thirty Days Hath September," "The Bride Came C. O. D.," costarring Bette Davis and Jimmy Cagney; "Affectionately Yours" and a segment of "Sergeant York," starring Gary Cooper in the role of the No. 1 hero of the First World War.

Starting this week are "Singapore," with Brenda Marshall and David Bruce; "Strange Alibi," with Joan Perry and Arthur Kennedy; "Bad Man of Missouri" and "Danger Zone," starring George Raft.

The 35 scripts being pecked out on the scenarists' typewriters comprise a list longer than you have been in town and will be duly considered after the boys and girls have changed their ribbons.

Katharine Cornell has begun rehearsals of her forthcoming production of Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma." Raymond Massey will appear opposite the actress-manager in the role of Sir Colenso Ridgeon. As in the same author's "Candida," there are two highly important male roles in "The Doctor's Dilemma," the other being Louis Dubedat, the tubercular husband, to be played by Bramwell Fletcher. Quite obviously, Miss Cornell hasn't been eating apples enough, for there are a whole squad of doctors in the comedy—all handsome roles. Ralph Forbes, Colin Keith-Johnston, Whitford Kane and Cecil Humphreys will have these assignments.

ᔓᔕ

The Theater Guild and Philip Barry, sponsor and author, respectively, of "The Philadelphia Story," the hit play of two seasons ago—just now finding its way to the local screen—are collaborating again on a new production. It is "Liberty Jones," a play with music, opening tomorrow night in the Shubert Theater, in New York, as the fourth production in the Guild's twenty-third subscription season. John Beal, of stage and screen, and Nancy Coleman have the leads.

ᔓᔕ

Those who predicted a highly incandescent future for Stirling Hayden, on the strength of his initial performance before the cameras in "Virginia," are about to be proved true prophets. The blond New Englander, a recent visitor in Washington, has just been rewarded with the role of Dorothy Lamour's leading man in "Dildo Cay," Paramount's film version of Nelson Hayes' best-seller—if Madeleine Carroll to Miss Lamour is a promotion!

ᔓᔕ

Getting a little closer home, Arch McDonald, that ever-present thespic threat to the theatrical eminence of George Arliss, Otis Skinner, Alfred Lunt, Maurice Evans, et al., is acting out the title role of George Kelly's "The Show-Off" in the George Washington High School Auditorium, Alexandria, Va., tomorrow and Thursday nights. Even if Arch doesn't bust the fence, he may be relied upon to lay down an elegant bunt that he probably will be able to stretch into a double.

ᔓᔕ

And still closer, Henry Hiser is currently presenting the original 1915 version of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at his Hiser Theater, out Bethesda way—just to show what the "Gone With the Wind" of a quarter-century ago really looked like. It looked pretty magnificent—in 1915.

ᔓᔕ

Two of this column's "best bets" are doing all right for themselves, The Civic Theater's "The Gentle People," under the discerning direction of Leon Askin, has clicked at Wardman Park and "Buck Privates," at RKO-Keith's, jumped 100 per cent in attendance over the weekend.

Play Leads in Broadway Hit

ELIZABETH LOVE AND ELLIOTT NUGENT as they appear in "The Male Animal," the comedy success presented by Herman Shumlin for the first time in Washington at the National Theater this week. The play was written by Mr. Nugent and James Thurber and enjoyed an eight months' run on Broadway, three in Chicago

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 3.

LAURITZ MELCHIOR was in Washington Thursday for the President's Birthday. At lunch, Eleanor Roosevelt invited him to return to the White House at 8 p. m. and sing at the "Cuff-link" dinner—which the President gives each year to a group of old friends . . . Melchior agreed and then began hunting for an accompanist for his repertoire of Danish songs. Alan Corelli, of the theater authority, volunteered to help—by phoning New York and inducing Otto Seybert, the composer-pianist, to fly to Washington immediately. Seybert arrived in time, met Melchior and they proceeded to the White House.

A RECENTLY ARRIVED Frenchman visited Fefe's Monte Carlo last night and told this story: Tristan Bernard, the French playwright, walked into Maxim's, in Paris, and found most of the tables occupied by Nazi officers. He called the proprietor and said: "You always said you'll get the Boche. Well—you've got them" . . . The current issue of Stage is its best . . . Mary Astor arrived at El Morocco last night, where she was complimented upon the way she looks. "Is that from having a baby?" she was asked. "No," confessed Miss Astor, "that's from having a role in a Bette Davis picture" . . . The unidentified girl with Gertrude Lawrence and Danny Kaye on the cover of Time is Florence Wiman. She won the Metropolitan Opera auditions this year.

GILBERT MILLER, seeking an actor for the role of an Englishman, invited Somerset Maugham to witness the rehearsal . . . The actor bristled with studied Britishness. He coughed and stammered, stressed the broad A's, swallowed half the words and inserted "Old boy" and "Right you are" into every sentence . . . "I don't think he'll do," said Miller. "I think hes' too English for this country" . . . "You're wrong," said Maugham.. "He's too English for any country."

THE GOLDEN GATE Quartet, of Cafe Society, who entertained at Constitution Hall—from which Marian Anderson had been barred—will sing at the White House on February 17, at the President's dinner for the Army and Navy officials . . . C. banned the dramatization of the contents of a letter from Britain for Sunday's "Behind the Mike" program. N. B. C. wants no war dramatizations . . . Barney Gallant is looking for additional space because of the rush of business . . . Herman Shumlin, who is directing the new Behrman play for the Playwrights Producing Co., was described by a radio interviewer as "a member of the Playrights." Shumlin took the mike and announced: "This is Herman Shumlin. I'm a producer. I believe playwrights should write plays, not produce them."

The patrons all turned toward that corner, to the young lady laughing with head thrown back, who had been unnoticed. It was Greta Garbo.

New Stewart Film Is Gone Forever

The Henry Fonda production, "Homer the Hungry," starring James Stewart in 14 roles, will never reach any part of the public. The 16 mm. silent film epic was begun four years ago. It was made on Sundays when the two could get together, was never finished and has been reposing in Fonda's workshop.

Now that Fonda will finish "The Lady Eve" with Barbara Stanwyck within a few days and Stewart will have some free time, they decided to take their picture off the shelf.

'Male Animal' Comedy Smash At National

It is a fine tribute to the dramaturgic skill of James Thurber and Elliott Nugent, authors, that "The Male Animal," which Herman Shumlin presented for the first time in Washington before a capacity audience in the National Theater last night, should find room for so much sound thinking in three acts and four scenes so tightly packed with laughter.

This pungently written and splendidly acted comedy is at once a plea for tolerance and intellectual freedom, a biting indictment of college management in these United States and a brilliant commentary upon the manner in which "the male animal" comports himself when predatory intruders invade the sanctuary in which he cherishes and protects his mate.

Relying upon no silken subtleties or pallid parlor sophistries in any of its ramifications, it expresses both its deep-seated convictions and slightly delirious whimsies in loud and lusty speeches, loquacious logic, hilarious humor and tumultuous action.

It is Midwestern's big football game of the year that brings trustees, former gridiron stars and alumni back to their alma mater at just the time a youthful "unconfused liberal" among the student body has published an inflammatory editorial in the college paper, announcing that Prof. Tommy Turner, a patient tutor in English, is about to read one of Vanzetti's letters to those who sit at his feet in quest of higher learning. It is a pretty serious thing in the view of Trustee Ed Miller, in whose eyes the new stadium he has been instrumental in financing is the biggest achievement in Midwestern's history. Joe Ferguson, the greatest halfback the school ever turned out, feels a little differently about it, being on the brink of divorce and remembering that Mrs. Turner was the girl he really wanted to marry. Dean Damon, with a ubiquitous umbrella as the symbol of his leaning toward an honorable appeasement of all the campus' involvements, is a placid conciliator until the spunk of one of his under-teachers stiffens his backbone and inspires him to rebellion. Such is the lamentably inadequate summary of the combustible materials that cause "The Male Animal" to strike fire.

Probably the most adroitly fashioned scene in the three acts is that in which Prof. Turner and Wally Myers, the pinkish editorialist, sit down over several bottles of high-proof reinforcement and indulge in philosophical contemplation of the sinister implications of "dictatorship" in school conduct, the vagaries of the feminine gender and the protective function of "the male animal," from the penguin to the bird of paradise, via the wolf, tiger, etc. Never have the complexities of the serious business of living been given such delightfully inebriated elucidation.

A Ne Plus Ultra Cast

This, of course, all would come to naught, were the piece less deftly played than it is. Coauthor Elliott Nugent, as Prof. Turner, is the perfect embodiment of the physically ineffectual mental stalwart who sees the necessity of man's declaring his independence and hanging onto his wife. His performance is marked by that perfect assumption of weak robustness that makes the character the dominant figure in the play. As the football hero, exuding animal energy and mental vacuity at every pore, Leon Ames contributes a study in the supremacy of superficiality that is overwhelmingly effective and the veteran Ivan Simpson, at the opposite dynamic pole, is enormously powerful in his weakness.

But it is upon the competent shoulders of Elizabeth Love that the real feminine burden rests. As the buffeted wife of Prof. Turner, Miss Love, despite a soft Southern accent, fits nicely into the role of the young woman who might survive hectic experiences even at a college called Midwestern. There is charm, grace and efficiency in everything she does, even to not knowing what day it is, romantically and economically, a good deal of the time. The supporting players uniformly maintain the brisk and breezy pace set by the principals.

Subscriber to the Theater Guild-American Society season or not, "The Male Animal" is, by all means, a member of the species you should meet.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 3 (INS).—Neither the fans nor Twentieth Century-Fox are paying a mite of attention to the smart Harvard boys' crack in the Harvard lampoon that Gene Tierney is the worst discovery of the year. Everyone takes issue at that, for despite the Harvard sarcasm she is a fine actress both on the stage and screen. In fact, for my money she is one of 1940's best discoveries and is, I believe, a potential 1941 star. "Red Cross Girl," by Steve Fisher, a Cosmopolitan writer, has just been purchased for her.

She gets her break co-starring with Brod Crawford in a little opus titled "Black Cat," which starts February 13, with 13 members in the cast. To add to the bad luck angle, Director Al Rogell is having everybody break a mirror and walk under a ladder the first day of shooting.*

Ernest Hemingway is like all writers. He works while he rests. Just after telling me that he wasn't going to write a line for a long time, an idea for a movie came to him about an American soldier of fortune on the Burma Road. He waxed more and more enthusiastic with the result that Y. Frank Freeman, quietly said, "We'll take your story," so Hemingway and his bride, the former Martha Gellohrn, sailed for China with a Paramount assignment. This will be the first story of the Japanese-Chinese conflict written by an eyewitness.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: George Sanders has become aware of Eleanor Troy, Florentine Gardens chorus girl; Kay Francis and Fritz Lang, who were inseparable for many weeks, talking things over at one of the popular cafes; Jane Russell and Bob Waterfield, halfback at U. C. L. A., have discovered each other; Janet Gaynor, who shouldn't be off the screen the way she looks now, will make a pacture if the right one comes along.

Jean Arthur and Frank Ross, who seem to have such good times together, very gay at the Scheherazade; Mrs. Charlie Feldman, who went into the hospital for a check-up, is home with an okay from her M. D.: the report that Lupe Velez and "Big Boy" Williams have said adieu, was denied by both over the telephone. I still will be surprised if they marry; Bette Davis and her bridegroom celebrated their first month of marriage with a dinner for two; the John Waynes helped Ciro's celebrate their first birthday.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

THE REFUGEE

I shall remember till I die
Manhattan traced against the sky,
Alabaster, ivory,
Rising baseless from the sea
Are lovely to my wondering eyes
As the far shores of Paradise.
I shall remember till I die
Her glistening towers, her tranquil sky.
And how I wept—who did not weep—
For bombs and guns and murdered sleep—
To see a path of gold 'twixt me

ADA JACKSON.

A year ago, when I listened to H. R. Knickerbocker's talk about the war, he gave Germany a 60-40 chance of winning, and frightened everybody; he had no idea, nor had anybody else at that time, that France would fall such an easy victim. The other night I heard him again. The very simplicity and casualness of his speech makes you pause and let his words penetrate. After all, he's been through it. He returned from England in October. His description of what's going on over there strikes terror through your backbone.

HOPPER

When he tells you Germany has a hundred fighting men to our one he knows what he's talking about. His praise of Winston Churchill and the morale of the British is wonderful to listen to. He thinks our motto should be "All aid to Britain"—and leave off "short of war." Only thing which prevents Germans from coming over here, says he, is the Royal Air Force and the British Navy. And if they go—what then?

ᔓᔕ

Andrea Leeds can't do her own bargaining with R. K. O. because she's still under contract to Sam Goldwyn, who discovered and built her into stardom . . . Virginia Field was so anxious to be with George Raft, who's just returned from the East, that she attended the races at Santa Anita Saturday in full motion picture make-up. Her fiance, Dick Greene, has joined up in Britain.

ᔓᔕ

ᔓᔕ

Charles Laughton, between pictures, has become Bel Air's head gardener, and when describing his own blooms to visitors sounds exactly like one of Ruth Draper's monologues . . . Jimmy Ellison isn't one of Hollywood's top stars. He's quiet, unassuming happily married and very much on the Joel McCrea order. Very few people know that his side line is designing, building, furnishing and renting small houses. He already has a group of 12, which are being lived in.

ᔓᔕ

Plans for our Greek benefit, which takes place in the Chinese Theater February 8, are colossal, and I believe warrant that adjective. A modern version of "The Mikado" will have Bob Hope, Jack Benny and Groucho Marx as the "three little maids from school." Mary Martin will sing "Tit Willow." And Frank Morgan does new lyrics of "I've Got You on My List."

ᔓᔕ

Bob Sherwood is writing a sketch, Clark and Carole will appear together, Laughton will do Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, Shirley Temple will definitely appear and may read off the names of contributors.

Without Shirley Povich

By Al Hailey

There's a fine old descriptive expression often bandied about stating that so-and-so is a "wart upon the body politic," and for some reason every time that term pops up, we get to thinking about the New York State Athletic Commission. That body, which rules with such an iron hand over the New York boxing industry, has gone into the matchmaking business again, it appears by the papers.

HAILEY

Now the duties of this august body are to protect the interests of the fight-going public, to see that the fights themselves are conducted on a fair and upright basis. Our understanding is that that commission—and any other so constituted (the District Boxing Commission, for instance)—should be entirely divorced from attempts to dictate what fights the public shall see and where it shall see them. But in the case of New York that it not so.

Despite all this Gen. John J. Phelan, a fearless gentleman if there ever was one, has issued an ultimatum in true totalitarian fashion which kills attempts of Washington promoters to unravel the abominable situation in boxing's featherweight division—one of the three divisions which has two "world champions."

Because of its strategic location in the cradle of America's prize fight industry, the New York commission can and will dictate to fight managers until those managers have spunk and backbone enough to take the financial risk of bucking the three-man body Gen. Phelan heads as chairman.

The aforesaid Phelan ultimatum consists of a terse warning to Chalky Wright, the No. 1 featherweight title contender, to give up any ideas of fighting Petey Scalzo, the National Boxing Association 126-pound champion, in Washington—"or else."

The "or else" implied in Gen. Phelan's communique is taken to mean that Wright and his manager, Eddie Walker, would incur disfavor in New York and lose out on the chance to fight the winner of the forthcoming Harry Jeffra-Joey Archibald fight, which Washington promoters are staging February 18 in Uline's Arena.

Thus, Gen. Phelan's action appears to be merely an arrogant display of New York power to force bread-and-butter-visioned fight managers to jump through any hoop that commission cares to designate. Here's why:

Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, after three months of work, finally succeeded in getting Scalzo to sign a contract to defend his N. B. A. title against Wright here in April. Talks with Walker brought forth the latter's verbal agreement and the invitation to send him a contract. It was Turner's plan to stage a two-fight elimination, with the winner of the Scalzo-Wright battle meeting the winner of the fight between the New York-Maryland-California champion, Jeffra, and Archibald to determine the "real champion"—if there's such a thing any more.

Premature publicity flashed on the light in New York, and Gen. Phelan immediately tied Wright up by forcing his manager to put up a $1,000 check subject to forfeit if Wright engaged in the Scalzo fight in Washington.

As a matter of fact the New York commission already has dictated just where and whom Wright will fight. The New York body has demanded a similar $1,000 forfeit check from Jeffra's manager, Max Waxman, that Harry shall defend his title in his home town, Baltimore, against Wright 90 days hence. This fight has been "made," and made on the premise that Jeffra will have no trouble with Archibald here the 18th.

However, it now appears that the New York commission, in again overstepping its bounds by threatening to seize the guarantee checks of $1,000, may be going a little too far.

From a letter we have from Eddie Walker, Wright's manager, it is clear that he would like to follow Eddie Mead's policy in the recent Henry Armstrong-Phil Furr case. He's dead certain Wright, the Los Angeles colored boy who fights "anything up to 147 pounds," can defeat both Scalzo and Jeffra, and he would like to hold that extra amount of folding money a Scalz-Wright fight wuld bring. But Walker is a cautious man, from the tone of his missive:

"I must admit I did receive an offer to box Scalzo from Promoter Joe Turner, but there was no mention about terms. I told him it would be okay . . . At today's meeting of the New York Boxing Commission they accepted my $1,000 forfeit check to fight the winner of the Harry Jeffra-Joey Archibald fight, but told me that I wouldn't be allowed to fight Scalzo and if I did I would forfeit my $1,000 check, which they are holding."

Maybe there's a note of wistfulness about Eddie's letter and maybe not—we'll try to decide that after polishing off this Bromo.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 3.—To the list of things that ASCAP is being blamed for, please add the sluggish Wanamaker Mile. This venerated classic of footracing was scheduled to be the feature event of the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden, but it turned out to be a listless trot. It was won by Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, in 4:13.6. Garden fans are acustomed to considerably better hoofing than that. Nurmi, Venzke, Bonthron, Cunningham and Fenski spoiled them.

CONSIDINE

Well, we are happy to announce today that it was ASCAP'S fault. True, the Messrs. Mehl, MacMitchell, Munske and Fenske (Note: How about a match race between Venske, Fenske and Munske?) did a lot of Alphonse and Gastoning for the first half mile. Nobody wanted to get out there in front to set the pace, and you never saw such a scandalous scramble for last place. The first half mile was run slower than the first half mile of the meet's 2-mile race. That fact may not astound you, but it knocked 15,000 worshippers of the great god split second right off their stools.

ASCAP wouldn't let the famed old track meet's brass band play Sousa. Nobody can ever estimate how many records Sousa's music set. Perhaps you know that at these big indoor meets the band thumps out a fiery musical accompaniment for every race, and plenty fortissimo, brother, plenty fortissimo.

For the long races there is music to fit the deliberate pace. For the quick, hot sprints, and the finishes of some of the longer races, there is fire-and-brimstone music that subtly penetrates the anguished muscles and windpipes of the tiring runers and spurs them on to hotter and hotter dashes toward the finish line. What a man that Sousa was for sore puppies!

However, the Millrose Games were brodacast over WINS and televised and broadcast over N. B. C. Sousa's militaristic zoom-zooming is on the restricted list. So is a lot of other military music that is near and dear to the tortured windpipes of foot racers. There wasn't much left for Band Leader Lambert L. Eben, jr., to choose from. Besides, he was being watched like a hawk by Bob Cotton, of WINS, and Hefty Warren Wade, of N. B. C. Each blanched with horrro at the end of the meet when Eben raised his baton and called for "Auld Lang Syne." They just caught his baton in time, and if they hadn't done so, ASCAP would have had both WINS and N. B. C. in court today. You see, "Auld Lang Syne" is on the restricted list, too. It isn't permitted to be broadcast.

An elderly fan missed the old air. When the crowd was filing out, he came timidly to the edge of the bandstand, adjusted the glasses that had probably looked at a quarter of a century of these games, and querulously demanded the reason for not closing the show wiht "Auld Lang Syne."

Eben tried to explain to him the current dispute in the music world. He said, "We just couldn't do it, so we played 'Military Maestro.' That's okay. That's a B. M. I. number." The old fan looked a little vague.

Greg Rice, late of Notre Dame, won the 2-mile event in spite of all the obstacles ASCAP could place in front of him. Just before the race, Greg's coach appeared at the bandstand. Prof. Eben was shuffling his music cards. Averting ASCAP trouble, and yet somehow evading "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair," which wouldn't be a very good stimulant for vigorous endeavor, the professor lined up the new rumba, "Frenesi," plus "So "You're the One," "I Hear a Rhapsody," "You Walk By," "The Wise Old Owl" and "There I Go." That amounted to nine minutes. The record for the 2-mile event is just a little under nine minutes.

Greg's coach cleared his throat and said, "Professor, on the third lap before the end, I want you to play the 'Notre Dame Victory March.' The professor looked helplessly at Cotton and Wade and they both stared back at him, bleakly nodding their heads from east to west. The professor tried to explain that he wasn't permitted to play any college music. "Against the law," he said, and the confused coach went off to break the bad news to Rice.

Blozis Nears Shot Mark in Seton Hall Games

G. U. Junior Wins Twice; Audet Is 2d

Georgetown Relay Teams Place Third; Terp 2-Milers Last; Mehl Upset

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, Feb. 3.—With only a week's work behind him after resting from football, Al Blozis, huge Georgetown University junior, tonight won both the 12-pound and 16-pound shotput events in the annual Seton Hall games. Earl Audet, a sophomore teammate, placed second in both events.

Blozis heaved the 16-pound ball 55 feet 6 inches, to come within 2¾ inches of his world indoor record, and threw the 12-pound shot the creditable distance of 62 feet 4½ inches. It was Blozis' 1941 debut.

His victories were the only ones credited to entries from Georgetown and Maryland. The Hoyas' two-mile relay team ran third to Fordham and New York University, and their one-mile relayers were third behind N. Y. U. and Pittsburgh. The time for the mile event was slow, 3:35.1. Both N. Y. U. and Georgetown consistently cover the distance in under 3:26.

Terps Last

Leslie MacMitchell, New York University's steadily improving sophomore miler, hit the first peak of a big-time career tonight as he whipped Walter Mehl, John Munski and Luigi Beccalli in the mile race of the annual Seton Hall Games.

Aided by his greater familiarity with running on a flat armory floor, the 20-year-old N. Y. U. "comer" ran a smart, well-mapped race. He got off in second place behind Paul Moore, of Van Nuys, Calif., held that spot when Mehl came up from fourth to first just past the half-mile mark, and then charged by the Wisconsin blond as the bell clanged for the last lap.

He held Mehl off all around the final circuit, then widened his lead to 5 yards down the final straightaway. Mehl, winner of two previous major miles this season, eased up and almost was caught by Munski for second place. The time was 4:23.4—slow—but MacMitchell did 60 seconds or better for his last quarter.

Kehoe Fourth

Another slow race produced the expected triumph for Campbell Kane, another Indianan, in the 1,000-yard run. Kane made his move on the bell lap to overtake National Champion and World Record-Holder John Borican. Borican beat Gene Venzke by only a foot for second, with Jim Kehoe, of Washington, D. C., fourth and Lynn Radcliff, of Syracuse University fifth and last. Chuck Fenske dropped out two laps from home. The time was 2:18.40.

Larry Bolvin Knocks Out Joey Archibald

Special Dispatch to The Post

Providence, R. I., Feb. 3.—Joey Archibald, who won the world's featherweight championship here and then was stripped of it by the National Boxing Association, was knocked out here tonight in the fourth of a 10-round local "feud" by Larry Bolvin.

Archibald is slated to fight Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, Md., the New York feather champion, in Washington, D. C., February 18 for the 126-pound title. Bolvin's knockout victory created outbursts of rioting among the spectators.

Promoter Joe Turner said here last night that he would confer with Matchmaker Gabe Menedez this morning on what steps to take in connection with the forthcoming Archibald Jeffra 15-round fight scheduled for Uline's Ice Arena.

Pro Gridders' 'Landis' Holds a Session in Redskin Territory

Tarheels Rally, Beat Maryland Quintet, 44-29

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 3.—Maryland's tight defenses held North Carolina to 18-20 for a half here tonight, but the undefeated conference leaders hit their stride in the second to win, 44-29.

Bob Fetters held George Glamack to two action shots the first half, but the high-scoring All-American broke loose for 11 points in the second and high scoring honors.

Oschenreiter Leads

Gene Oschenreiter paced the Old Liners with 10 points. Woodward followed with eight, and Wharton also featured afloor.

Maryland ran up a 14-7 lead on Carolina's starting team, and the Tarheels did not start clicking until the subs came in, led by the set shooting of George Paine and Reid Suggs from guard.

Hank Pessar also did some consistently good work as relief center and guard, and the Tarheels, after leading by a bare 2 points at halftime, rapidly extended their lead, never to be headed.

Landis, Club Owners Renew Minors Feud

Secret Note Opens Old 'Farm' War; N. L. To Meet Today to Thrash Out Problem; Fight Concerns Buying of Minor Loop Players

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 3.—A new and secretive struggle between baseball's club owners and Commissioner Kensaw M. Landis is underway as the result of a ruling concerning the handling of minor league players purchased by major league clubs.

A bulletin issued more than a week ago to the 16 major league clubs, but not revealed to other baseball people generally, invokes a new policy in bringing rookies to and keeping them in the big time, and reopens the old fight between Landis and the "chain store" operators.

The National League, which meets tomorrow, will thrash out the problem and perhaps bring the battle into the open. Until that meeting none of the club owners wished to become identified with the opposition.

In a Nutshell

However, this is the situation:

For many years baseball has had a draft regulation which permitted a player with certain terms of service in the minor leagues to be drafted by a major league club for a specified price—$7,500—from the Double A leagues like the International, Pacific Coast and American Association.

A player who was brought into the majors could be returned to the minors three times on option without waivers—and waivers obtained in September were good until May 1 of the mollowing year.

Landis' latest edict overrides these long-standing rules that were adopted by the clubs themselves. The new bulletin says that hereafter a minor league player who is eligible for the draft, but is purchased by a big league club, cannot be returned to the minors on optio nexcept by obtaining waivers on him. He must be retained until May 1 of the following year, not ask for waivers before March 1.

The exact wording of the bulletin is not known and its meaning was so obscure that one club executive said the intent of the ruling was not known until the last two or three days, although it had been issued more than a week ago.

Luster Made Head Coach At Oklahoma

By the Associated Press

Norman, Okla., Feb. 3.—The "graduate" system of athletic administration was installed at the University of Oklahoma today with the naming of two former Sooner gridiron stars to key positions—Dewey (Snorter) Luster as head football coach and Lawrence (Jap) Haskell as athletic director.

The two, who played at opposite ends on Coach Bennie Owen's great Sooner teams of 20 years ago, take over the positions vacated by Tom Stidham, on whose staff they served for three years. Both are 42 years old.

Launches New Policy

Stidham, who succeeded Maj. Biff Jones as head coach and athletic director in 1937, resigned two weeks ago to guide Marquette University's football future.

"This represents a new policy in recognizing the ability of the graduates of the university," said Lloyd Noble, president of the board of regents, in announcing the appointments.

Noble said Luster—first Sooner graduate to become head coach—would be allowed to name his own assistants. He added that neither the salary terms nor the length of Luster's contract would be set until the university athletic council had discussed the situation.

Leahy Signs For 5 Years At Boston

By the Associated Press

Haverhill, Mass., Feb. 3.—Frank Leahy, who guided the 1940 Boston College eleven through an undefeated season and a sugar bowl victory over Tennessee, has been signed to a new five-year contract at a substantial salary increase, Graduate Director John P. Curley announced tonight.

Curley's announcement was made to newsmen during a testimonial banquet by fellow citizens to Gene Goodreault, regular right end on the Boston College eleven, and was precipitated by rumors that the brilliant young head coach would move on to his alma mater, Notre Dame, to fill the post just vacated by Elmer Layden.

Louis Signs For Title Bout With Dorazio

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis signed today for the third defense of his title in two months and found the quality of the latest opposition so amusing that he laughed right out loud.

Agreeing formally to meet Gus Dorazio, Philadelphia Italian, in a 15-round title bout February 17—this city's first heavyweight championship event since Gene Tunney defeated Jack Dempsey in 1926—Joe's unusual merriment was caused by Dorazio's statement:

"I'll beat Louis by bobbing and weaving."

Cut-Rate Plan

"I'll be ready for him," Joe declared. "He won't be the first one who tried to bob and weave me out of my title." Joe referred to the ring tactics of Clarence "Red" Burman, the Baltimore red-head, who stayed almost five rounds with the champion last Friday night before losing consciousness.

Still showing a slightly puffed right eye from Friday night's fight, Louis came here with Mike Jacobs, who is copromoter with Herman Taylor, of Philadlephia, for the Dorazio bout.

Taylor expects to jam Convention Hall's 15,000 seats at "bargain" prices ranging from $1.25 to $5.75 ringsides, the lowest prices in two decades or more for a heavy championship bout.

Irish Coach To Sign for Five Years

Salary Is Reported $20,000 Annually; Will Have Powers Like Judge Landis

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Elmer Layden resigned today as head football coach and athletic director at Notre Dame to accept a five-year contract as commissioner of professional football.

LAYDEN

The contract, effective March 1, calls for an annual salary of $20,000. Layden's contract at Notre Dame expired last Saturday.

His duties as boss of the National Football League and several minor circuits will be comparable to those of Kenesaw M. Landis, czar of baseball.

Deal Completed Saturday

The deal by which the rapidly growing professional sport obtained Layden was completed two days ago.

Club owners of the National Football League, which sponsored the hiring of a commissioner, met here several weeks ago to consider several persons for the job but Layden had not been mentioned previously as a possibility.

Layden's contract at Notre Dame expired last Saturday.

An All-American star as one of the famed "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame in the early twenties, Layden became head coach there in 1934. In seven years his Irish elevens won 46 games and lost only 14. His best season was in 1938 when Notre Dame won eight of nine games.

Before going to Notre Dame, the 37-year-old mentor coached at Columbia College, Dubuque, Iowa, and Duquesne University at Pittsburgh.

Takes Over March 1

Layden's contract as czar of the pro gridders becomes effective March 1.

"I naturally am very happy that the club owners of the league have picked me to direct their organization," Layden said. "I am deeply indebted to my alma mater, Notre Dame, for the years of consideration and cooperation I have received as a student, athlete and coach. It is with regret that I leave the university. The future welfare of my family influenced my decision.

"The National League is the fastest growing institution in American sport. I hope and believe I can be helpful in the further development of the organization. We shall continue to safeguard the status of intercollegiate football. There is a place for both games."

Storck's Office Not Affected

Club owners had said previously that the office of league president, now held by Carl Storck, Dayton, Ohio, would not be affected by the creation of the commissioner post. Storck has been president since the death two years ago of Joe Carr, Columbus, Ohio.

The league is expected to define the duties of both Layden and Storck at its annual April meeting in Chicago.

At Dayton, Storck said the appointment was "all news to me."

He praised Layden as a "grand fellow and a fine football character," then said he would have no

'Porky' Pranschke Developing Into Ace Scorer for Eagles

A slow starter, 195-pound Gordon Pranschke, barrel-like Washington Eagles' wingman, lately has been playing about the best hockey on the club, capping his streak with a pair of neat goals against Baltimore Sunday night. Gripped by a three-match losing streak, the Eagles will depend heavily on him tonight when they meet the Sea Gulls at Riverside Stadium

Dorimar Scores Nose Victory in Feature Race at Hialeah

Heliopolis, The Favorite, Is Poor Last

English-Bred Horse, Heavily Backed, Is Badly Beaten Early; Balloter Is Third

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 3.—Although he suffered some bad racing luck in the mile and a sixteenth test, Heliopolis, the English 5-year-old which Elmer Dale Shaffer purchased from Lord Derby, failed to cover himself with glory in the Naranja Purse here today. Making his first start, the horse that finished third in the 1939 Epsom Derby finished a bad last behind four supposedly inferior class rivals. The purse went to Woodvale Farm's Dorimar by a nose over Bomar Stable's Detroit Bull. Balloter was beaten 15 lengths for show money.

Heliopolis went postward at 95 cents on the dollar. The good-looking son of the noted Hyperion, whose goal here is the $50,000 Widener Cup (in which he is weighed at 123 pounds), broke slowly, was rushed up to run with Bellringer, and was carried wide by the latter as they swept wide around the clubhouse curve. Both horses went very wide again as they rounded into the back stretch. Heliopolis, facing horses that had run in claiming races, was close enough on the back stretch to make the grade, but he dropped out of contention a bit later and finally finished last.

Dorimar paid $9.80 and covered a mile and a sixteenth of the turf course in 1:49 4-5.

Dorimar set the pace by a slight margin. He and Detroit Bull fought it out like a team in a desperate duel, with Apprentice Conn McCreary, back in the saddle after several days' rest due to a leg injury, putting up a strong finish to keep Dorimar on top. Before the photo result was known, McCreary claimed foul against Detroit Bull. He was in a tight sot during the long drive while running on the inside.

Heliopolis may improve, but he was a distinct disappointment to those who backed him so heavily. In all, the equine war refugee was beaten about 20 lengths. He carried 114 pounds. The winner was in with a feathery 98 pounds and gave Apprentice McCreary a double.

Old Cowhand To Make Bow Thursday at Arena

A one-time cowhand from the Lone Prairie, Red Brill, will make his bow on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena in a special 30-minute match against Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Strong Man, on the card featuring the Green Hornet, mysterious masked wrestler, and Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle, of St. Louis. Brill is a 220-pounder, and will wrestle in the East for the first time. He is a native of Fort Worth, Tex., but developed his muscles branding cattle and roping steers.

In the semiwindup Rough Rudy Dusek will engage Paul Boesch, of California. Another match that promises to bring out some red hot battling will be between Joe DeValto, French refugee wrestler, and Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain.

ADEHALA, well up on the outside under light restraint in the early running, moved up gamely entering the stretch, disposed of the leaders and held SOCRATIC safe in the final drive. SOCRATIC gradually bettered his position and closed with a belated rush between the leaders. ART OF WAR, used up forcing the pace, faltered in the final drive. RED BURR rushed to the front and faltered in the last quarter mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CADMIUM, $5.60, $3.20, $2.40; KANSAS CITY, $3.20, $3.60; AIR BRIGADE, $2.90.

CADMIUM, a trailer until midway around the turn, moved up fast on the outside when placed to pressure and outstayed KANSAS CITY when it came to a drive. KANSAS CITY followed the pace closely, took a brief lead through the stretch, but was unable to withstand the winner's bid. AIR BRIGADE displayed more speed than usual, but then faltered in the stretch run. The others were beaten off.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,500; allowances. The Naranja. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DORIMAR, $9.80, $3.50, $3.10; DETROIT BULL, $3.80, $3.00; BALLOTER, $3.80.

DORIMAR, saving much ground rounding the first turn, assumed an easy lead, was rated in front and, responding gamely when challenged, outlasted DETROIT BULL when the final issue came. DETROIT BULL, on the outside of the winner the last 6 furlongs, made a game effort, but could not get up. BALLOTER continued with good courage to hold BELLRINGER safe. The latter bore out rounding the first turn. HELIOPOLIS bore out badly going around the first turn.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUAKER BRASS, $14.40, $8.40, $6.20; BAGGRAVE, $22.20, $11.80; CONRAD MANN, $5.60.

QUAKER BRASS, never far from the leader, took command entering the stretch and held BAGGRAVE safe to the end. BAGGRAVE displayed the most speed, but was no match for the winner when challenged. CONRAD MANN, slow to get going, closed a big gap the last half mile. SURE SWIFT suffered interference rounding the first turn, made up ground to the final eighth and then faltered.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:32. Winner, F. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PIT TERRIER, $6.70, $3.00, $2.50; SNOW, $3.30, $2.80; HANDIBOY, $3.50.

PIT TERRIER, outrun early, came to the outside to improve his position, responded gamely when put to extreme pressure and just lasted. SNOW wore down HANDIBOY to take the lead, but appeared to shy inside the sixteenth pole and came again to barely miss. HANDIBOY sprinted into a long lead, saved ground and fought it out gamely. LANDLUBBER lacked speed early and closed some ground.

Dear Al:

Eddie Johnson, former University of Maryland star and son of former pitcher Walter Johnson, will have a little spare change when he reports to the United States Army. His filly, Good Reception, was claimed by G. W. Coburn yesterday for $2,500. Those who saw the King Ranch's Dispose win the Bahamas Handicap here last Saturday are loud in their praise of the son of Discovery. He definitely is Kentucky Derby timber. Dispose was cut down in the Walden at Pimlico last November and his race here was his first since he trailed far behind at the Maryland track. Dispose was shipped here from Columbia, S. C., four days before his winning effort. Trainer Max Hirsch sent him right back to Columbia and plans to bring him here for the Flamingo and then return him to South Carolina until just before the Derby. It is said that Hirsch is training him at Columbia, where he can send Dispose the wrong way of the track. I'm told that, due to a leg condition, this is necessary and permission cannot be obtained at Hialeah. That may or may not be correct, but I'm passing it along... One thing is certain, Dispose can run and will dispose of a lot of good opposition if he stays sound. Lou Janof and Norman Kal got in from Washington and are giving the bangtails a battle. Fred Burton, racing secretary at Charles Town, is taking over the same job at Keeneland Park. The outrider here is Kenny Force, and he is a pip. The other day the bridle came off a 2-year-old and Kenny caught him by the tail. He rides a polo pony, said to have cost $2,500. John C. Clark, president of the Miami Jockey Club, received word that his 3-year-old mare, Tops, was the winner of a maiden race last week at Sydney, Australia. This was her first appearance at 3. Clark bought her while visiting in Australia. BILL.

First race—WARLEE was bothered by a loose horse at the start of that last and still ran a creditable race. Has speed to overcome the poor post position and I'm going to string along. TRUE HEART is a fair sort. LADY CLIPPER for the minor award.

Third race — WEISENHEIMER finds a soft spot that seems to suit his purposes. Likes the sprint route and needs only the right handling. SYL'S BETTY is a threat in a field of this kind. JUANITA ran well with maidens and is improving.

Third race—DOMKIN seems to have found the company he can whip. Gets in light and will like it if the track is muddy. CHARLOTTE GIRL has worked well and should be in the thick of contention. ESPINO GOLD is a possible surprise.

Fourth race—CAPE COD won when opposed by such as these. Promises to do a lot of running and I'm going to take my chances. TRAGIC ENDING was a recent winner and will be close. BUCKBOARD may be the third one.

Fifth race—JEANNE D'ARC has plenty of early speed, gets in light and the prospect of an off track makes me lean to her. DAMAGED GOODS has been rested and may need a race. BREATHLESS won here and gets in with a feather assignment.

Sixth race — CORYDON has worked well and could be the right one in this distance test. Gets in with 113 pounds and the rigging is about right. RINGIE'S last was encouraging. TOPEE, despite 120 pounds, must be considered especially on an off track.

Seventh race—JACK STING gets my call in this affair. Breaks off the rail and has the speed to make the most of the position. SIR REG was a recent winner, but seems overweighted. KNOXVILLE has trained well.

Eighth race—MARY SCHULZ appears to have a slight edge over these. SHORT DISTANCE, with 100 pounds, is dangerous. WOODEN INDIAN drew smart money last out.

Best bet—CORYDON.

further comment until the annual league meeting in April.

American Pro Loop Unimpressed by News

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 3 (AP).—William D. Griffith, president of the American Professional Football League, said tonight his loop "objects to calling Elmer Layden commissioner of professional football."

"As far as we're concerned, Layden is just an employe of the National League," he said. "Not a single official of the American League was approached concerning the idea of a football commissioner. Officials of the Pacific League and many other minor leagues were not contacted.

Layden Announcement Surprises Students

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 3 (AP).—Students and faculty members like were amazed to learn tonight that Notre Dame had lost Elmer Layden, its popular football coach.

Few apparently knew any change in the Athletic setup was likely until the announcement was made that Layden had resigned to become commissioner of professional football.

The announcement immediately precipitated a campus-wide guessing game as to the identity of the new head coach. Most prominently mentioned were Eddie Anderson, Iowa; Jimmy Crowley, Fordham; Harry Stuhldreher, Wisconsin, and Frank Leahy, Boston College.

The Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of the school, was not available tonight, but it was believed he would have a statement soon, possibly tomorrow.

Challedon Fit For Big Race At Santa Anita

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.—The 1940 handicap champion, Challedon, looked like a fit horse today as he galloped 6 furlongs under the watchful eye of Trainer Don Cameron, and any doubt that W. L. Brann's color-bearer will start in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap seems to have vanished.

"With normal breaks we are a cinch to make it up to the big race March 1," Cameron said tonight. "Challedon's first start here will be in the San Antonio Handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth February 22."

Victory in the Santa Anita Handicap would place Challedon close to Seabiscuit's all-time money winning record of $437,730. Challedon has earned $322,835 in three seasons of racing.

Challedon has been cut in the Agua Caliente future book from 4 to 1 to 3 to 1. C. S. Howard's Mioland remains the favorite at 2½ to 1, with Myron Selznick's Cant Wait and H. C. Hill's Sweepida, 10 to 1; Valdina Farm's Saint Andrews, 12 to 1, and A. G. Vanderbilt's Impound and Yancy Christmas' Rough Pass, 12 to 1.

Howard is the leading money winner for the season at Santa Anita with $42,010, Mrs. V. S. Bragg second with $21,700 and Vanderbilt third with $20,750.

Christoforidis, Lesnevich Signed For Fla. Title Bout

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 3.—Promoter Jack Kearns announced today that he has matched Anton Christoforidis, of Greece, and Gus Lesnevich, of New Jersey, for a light-heavyweight title fight at Miami or Palm Beach, Fla., in the last week of February.

Kearns said that this 15-round scrap will be the first of a series of Nation-wide bouts to be staged for the benefit of the British-American Ambulance Corps.

Christoforidis is recognized as light-heavyweight king by the National Boxing Association by virtue of his victory over Melio Bettina at Cleveland January 13. Billy Conn is still recognized as champion in New York and affiliated States.

Kearns said Christoforidis and Lesnevich have been guaranteed $15,000 each.

Coach Ripley SeesFordham Engage Yale

G. U. to Risk Streak Against Orange, Elis And Colgate in as Many Days on Road

Taking advantage of a midterm holiday, Georgetown Basketball Coach Elmer Ripley drove the Hoya cagers through a three-hour session yesterday morning before leaving for New York to scout a pair of future Hoya opponents.

Ripley saw the Fordham-Yale game last night in the Rams' gymnasium and will join the Syracuse-bound Georgetown team tonight for the journey to upper New York State.

The Hoyas are scheduled for a short workout this morning and will leave in the evening for tomorrow's big game with Syracuse, one of the East's better teams. They move to Colgate Thursday night and meet Yale Saturday in New Haven.

The Hoyas have reason to fear all three road foes, despite their somewhat spotty records. Syracuse is bigger than Penn State, a lanky club whose height kept the ball away from Georgetown most of the evening. Colgate has just regained the use of its five best players and in their first time as a unit they beat a good Niagara team. Yale, last in the Eastern Conference, came to life Saturday and beat Princeton, a club that had fair success in the Midwest.

All three teams will be gunning for Georgetown's winning streak, which has reached 11 in a row. Their showing on this trip will be closely watched by New York schools, who will do the inviting for the Madison Square Garden Tournament in March. Ripley has had word that Georgetown is being considered but they have a tough road to hoe from here in.

4th Ranking Star Enters Badminton Tourney Friday

One of the most serious threats in the Atlantic Coast Badminton championships which start Friday at Kensington Armory will be Carl Loveday, fourth ranking star of the country, it was revealed last night. The 19-year-old Californian's entry was received along with those of Ken Quigley, third ranking player, and Walter Kramer, former national singles champ.

A remarkably fast defensive player who has recently developed a dazzling offense, Loveday's finest performance was turned in during the national tournament in Seattle, Wash., when he gave National Champion Dave Freeman a terrific battle before losing in the semi-finals.

Entry deadline for the three-day Kensington event has been set for tonight, but all outstanding players in this section are expected to be on the line in time.

Joe Louis' Future Foe, Abe Simon, Loses Decision

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 3.—Big Jim Thompson, 239-pound Pittsburgh Negro, won a disputed 10-round decision tonight from Abe Simon, 254, of New York, who is scheduled to fight Champion Joe Louis in Detroit next month.

Two officials voted for Thompson and one for Simon and many of the ringside fans voiced disagreement over the decision. Much of the fighting between the two biggest heavyweights ever to fight here was at close range.

In the 10-round semifinal, Tommy Tucker, 176½, of New York, knocked out Joe Peters, 170½, of Florida, in the second round after flooring him twice.

Recreation Five Beats Tuskegee

Mamakos Gets Title Fight With Zale

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Tony Zale, Gary, Ind., middleweight champion in National Boxing Association jurisdiction, today accepted a 15-round title match with Steve Mamakos, Washington, D. C., for February 21 in the Chicago Stadium.

Zale recently outpointed Mamakos in a ten-round overweight bout, winning by a split decision. Zale won the title last July from Al Hostak, of Seattle, Wash.

Zale's manager, Sam Pian, had been in contact with Hostak's managers in Seattle, and had been reported as accepting a fight with Hostak February 21.

Chris Dundee, manager of the New York State middleweight champion, Ken Overlin, also had made overtures to Pian in attempt to arrange a title fight between Zale and George Abrams, top-ranking Washington middleweight, who is a stablemate of Overlin.

Mamakos will be granted a leave of absence from the 121st Engineers, Washington National Guard unit, in order to fulfill the Zale engagement, it was stated.

Coach Says Eagles' Slump Only Natural

Mackenzie Reiterates Confidence in Team as Boys Prepare for Sea Gulls Tonight, Hoping To Regain Winning Form

By Jack Munhall

In the face of stories that the Washington Eagles' three-match losing streak is due to dissension, Coach Redvers Mackenzie yesterday explained the team's current slump as a natural letdown and reiterated his confidence in his players. Tonight the Eagles, now only one point ahead of the second-place Orioles, will try to snap back against the Atlantic City Sea Gulls at 8:30 at Riverside.

Mackenzie, outspoken as usual, denied any widespread discontent on his club but indicated his alarm at the situation by ordering for this afternoon a private pep meeting of all the players.

In reply to published stories that the Eagles were too busy fighting among themselves to concentrate on playing winning hockey, Mackenzie issued the following statement:

Slump Only Natural

"It is unreasonable to presume that any team will go through an entire season without a letdown of some kind, and it was inevitable that we should strike a snag, sooner or later. However, it is just as reasonable to believe that a team such as ours will bound back into stride quickly, and we may do it tomorrow night against the Sea Gulls."

Continuing, Mackenzie asserted that there were many factors contributing to the present slump, chief among them the team's recent schedule of three tough matches in as many nights, the injury which has handicapped Norm Burns, the league's leading scorer, and the weakened condition of Goalie Gordie Hemming and Lester Colvin.

Both Hemming and Colvin are recuperating from touches of influenza. The former has lost 12 pounds from his none too robust frame and was rested over the week-end even though Colvin, too, was underweight and below form.

Pranschke Praised

Though Washington, as a team, was guilty of some of its worst play of the season Sunday night in its 6-3 loss to the Orioles—their second setback in three days by Baltimore—Mackenzie praised the competitive spirit and performance of Gordon (Porky) Pranschke. The 195-pound wing seems to have at last reached top condition and has his feared shot functioning with deadly accuracy. He tallied two of the Eagles' three goals Sunday.

2 Interhigh Games Today At Roosevelt

By way of starting the last two weeks of public high school competition before the championship round-robin tournament, two interhigh games are listed today at Roosevelt's gym.

At 3:30 Eastern tangles with Woodrow Wilson and approximately an hour later Western meets up with Central. In each case the latter will be out to gain one of the four places in the title tourney, while the former is trying to clinch a favorable position now in its possession.

Roosevelt Goes Outside

Unless a decisive upset marks today's play, Eastern and Western should emerge triumphant. Both have won two of their three starts, while Wilson can boast only one victory in three games and Central owns only one in four. A loss to Western will definitely eliminate the Vikings from title consideration.

While other interhigh clubs are warring on its floor, Roosevelt, the leader, goes into outside action against Montgomery Blair today. The clash will be at 3:30, along with meetings between Tech and Coolidge, Mount Rainier and Gonzaga, Rockville and Gaithersburg and Devitt and Mount St. Joseph's, of Baltimore. Each will be on the latter's court. The only night engagement brings together G. W. High and Fairfax in Alexandria at 8 o'clock.

famous sprint for the last lap and a half, Greg Rice, of South Bend, Ind., won the 2-mile invitation race at the annual Seton Hall indoor track meet tonight for his eleventh straight victory in two board track seasons.

The chesty little Midwesterner spread-eagled his field, beating "Old Joe" McCluskey by 20 yards and leaving Tommy Deckard, of Bloomington, Ind., another 20 yards behind. Don Lash, former king of the two-milers, had to sprint for all he was worth down the last straight away to beat the New York A. C.'s George DeGeorge for fourth place.

Rice never was worse than second. Nine laps from home he took over the lead, yielded it to McCluskey for a lap and a half, then regained it virtually without effort when he decided it was time to move.

Roy Cochran, of Indiana, Big Ten quarter-mile champion, ran his customary front race for his customary triumph—No. 4 in a row—at 600 yards. Running a 56.3 quarter, the stylish Hoosier drew the kick from his rivals and finished smoothly in 1:15.5, with a 4-foot edge on Jim Herbert who had 2 feet on Charley O'Donnell, of Holy Cross.

Walter Haight Goes South

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

Four Washington knaves went after kingfish yesterday. Frank Cronan, Bob Cook, Earl Jameson (he owns the boat) and I played in and out the window with the Gulf Stream all afternoon. We didn't catch a kingfish—in fact, we didn't catch a queenfish, a jackfish or a tenfish. Furthermore we didn't catch a fish, although Cronan caught the fourth eight and made the rest of us feel like deucefish. Biggest pot of the afternoon, too.

HAIGHT

Anyway, we were using mullet for bait. Mullet is a fish about as big as a hardhead. Strips are cut from it to resemble little fish. These are dragged through the water and the kingfish believes he has a sweet tidbit until he feels the hook and then, as a rule, it's too late. As I said before we didn't embarrass any knigfish, but that's the general idea. When we arrived at the boat around noon, Jameson called Cook and told him to get the bait, saying, "I want fresh bait, too." Then he beckoned to Cook and whispered something in his ear. I didn't get what he told Cook but it ended with "——and take Haight with you." Well, Cook and I went around to the fish house.

Every time he picked up one he would look at me and then either put it in the bag or lay it aside. Well, returning from the ocean, Jameson and Cook got into an argument about why we didn't catch any fish. Incidentally, we had seen several caught on other boats near us. Jameson contended that our poor luck could be blamed on one thing—rotten bait. Well, I was up on the deck and apparently asleep but I heard every word that Jameson bum said—"I told you when you went to get the bait, if the eyes lookd all bloodshot like Haight's don't buy it and I even made you take Haight with you."

The kingfish apparently didn't like our bait, but the pelicans did. They began to follow us when we were a mile from shore, so we obliged by tossing them the stale mullet. Now I won't say who did it and I'll admit it was a low-down, dirty trick but, Boss, please forgive me if I say I haven't seen anything as funny in years. Somebody conceived the idea of fastening two fish on opposite ends of a string about 6 feet long. The contraption was tossed to the pelicans and it caused a riot. About ten of them dived for the fish. A bird came up with one and started to fly off when he found it yanked out of his mouth. Once two pelicans took off, each with a fish. They tried to go in opposite directions. The fish and string popped out of their mouths. Another pair caught the fish before they hit the water.

Finally, the inevitable happened. The same pelican got both fish. I began worrying about the effect of that piece of string on the digestive apparatus of the bird. However, after you have seen them swallow hornfish with spikes 2 inches long, poisonous eels and fish scales as big as a half dollar, I guess that string won't hurt them. Then again, that mullet was old enough by 6 p. m. to rot 6-inch rope. Jameson, despite the fact that he is a left-handed golfer, proved an ideal host.

Jameson spent 13 years in the Navy and does a good job of navigating his sturdy, little craft. I asked him if he always was able to dodge those reefs that I saw on the wall map. He said that he had only been stuck on a reef once. The boat can do better than 25 miles an hour, and he said they were going pretty fast when they ran aground. Jameson, who was wearing bathing trunks, climbed over the side to push the boat off. The water was only up to his knees. He tugged and pulled, but he couldn't budge her. One of the fellows on the boat, seeing Jameson in the shallow water, said, "Wait a minute, I'll roll up my pants and help you." He stepped off the other side of the boat and disappeared under the water. "It seemed like a minute before we saw a couple of bubbles," said Jameson. "When he finally came to the top, he bounced out of the water almost full length. His face was purple, and he blew the air out of his lungs with a bellow that must have shaken Miami Beach. That's how the bottom is around here. It was less than 2 feet on my side of the boat and 70 feet where he stepped off."

The next time those guys want to go fishing, I'm going to suggest that they buy fresh mullet, bring it to my room and play cards.

MIAMI HAIGHT.

London Stocks

London, Feb. 3 (AP).—Security prices pulled ahead today after drifting lower most of last week. Success of the British Libyan campaign was the motive force behind the rally.

Domestic rails rose sharply in late trade as provincial demand developed on the prospect of satisfactory dividend announcements.

Anglo-Iranian and Shell Transport paced an upward move among oils. Kaffirs held steady despite the weekend flare-up of civil disturbance in Johannesburg.

Industrials tended higher, especially the cement and heavy manufacturing groups.

British government bonds started ahead but small offerings during the session put prices back to the previous close or a shade lower. Japanese bonds continued to improve.

Boston Wool

Boston, Feb. 3 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Very little interest was being shown today in offerings of domestic wools in Boston. Occasional inquiries were received for country-packed ¾ and ¼-blood semibright fleeces at around 40 cents, grease basis, delivered East. Fine Ohio delaine fleeces were offered at 42 to 44 cents, in the grease, without attracting buyers. Foreign wools of fine and ¾-blood grade continued in good demand at firm prices.

Wheat Rally Snuffed Out In Late Deals

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 3.—A wheat price rally that reached its peak at ½ cent net gain was snuffed out in late trading here today and futures quotations closed ¼ to ⅜ of a cent lower than Saturday, within fractions of the lowest levels since last October.

The late setback was attributed partly to reports of increased receipts in the Southwest, an estimate placing the Canadian July 31 carryover at 576,000,000 bushels, largest on record, and failure of a securities market rally to make headway. Earlier in the session buying credited to previous short sellers, dealers reinstating lines sold out last week and consuming interests had contributed to the upturn.

May wheat closed at 81¼@81⅜, and July at 75¼@75⅜. Corn was unchanged to ¾ off; May, 61¼; July, 61½. Oats unchanged to ⅜ down. Soybeans unchanged. Rye, ⅛ to ½ lower, and lard 2-5 higher.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 3 (AP).—Cotton futures seesawed in a 9-point range today and finished 1 point lower to 3 higher.

The list moved up at the start despite lower Bombay cables when a leading Houston spot firm was credited with buying around 8,000 bales. Bombay sold at the opening, but interests with Japanese connections were fair buyers.

Speculative and trade liquidation, backed by bearish rumors of repossession of cotton from the Government loan, spiked any further rallying efforts and narrowly irregular movements developed. Trade price-fixing and spot house buying absorbed a large part of the offerings.

Worth Street textile brokers reported routine Monday checking. Prices were unchanged to ⅛ cent a yard higher.

Exports Saturday, 886 bales; season so far, 672,893. Port receipts, 10,673. Port stocks, 3,479,655.

Trust Rule Vote Asked By N. A. S. D.

For the first time since the adoption of original rules of fair practice, members of the National Association of Security Dealers were asked yesterday to vote on an amendment to the rules. The proposed amendment has to do with the pricing, selling and redemption of securities of open-end investment companies.

The new rule will achieve certain standardization of practices among underwriters and distributors of this type of trust, will minimize the dilution of the investor's interest in funds, and will tend to vest the distribution of securities of such companies in responsible hands.

SEC Consulted

The rule has been worked out by a representative committee in the industry in conjunction with other interested members of the association and consultation with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The reduction of the dilution of shareholders' interest is one of the outstanding aims of the new rule. The chief attack on this problem is through the provision for a change in prices of trust shares at least twice daily, instead of once, which is the present general practice.

Henry Vance, of Massachusetts Distributors, chairman of the N. A. S. D. committee which formulated the rules, claims that "the method suggested is not only fair to investors in shares of such companies, but in addition is very practical in that it allows the retention of a firm offering price, which is so essential to the handling of orders for new securities."

Abuses Eliminated

Another outstanding article in the new regulations provides for an agreement in writing between the underwriter or principal distributor and the security dealer. It has its parallel in underwriting agreements between the underwriter and distributor of securities in the more general type of public security offerings.

Its aim is the facilitation of enforcement of the rules and a clear definition of responsibilities of all parties. It enables the general distributor to have a greater control over the dealer, the lack of which has led to many abuses in the past and will result in the elimination of the more undesirable type of dealer.

Worthy of note is a so-called "placement" provision in the contract between dealer and underwriter whereby in the event securities are repurchased by the issuing trust within seven days, all underwriters' and dealers' concessions, fees and "load" will be returned to the trust.

The purpose in this amendment is to discourage "riskless trading" by the dealer or investor who might buy shares just before a price rise and then resell them at once. Another section provides that no party shall purchase an investment company security from a holder of record at less than bid price quoted by the issuing trust or its principal underwriter as agent.

Stocks Edge Downward After Early Rally; Average Sets New Low Since August 19

New York, Feb. 3.—Erosion continued in the stock market today after an early attempt at a rally got nowhere. While a handful of issues managed to cling to modest gains, losses of fractions to around 2 points were well in the majority at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 41.6, a new low mark since August 19 last. Dealings on the whole were slack but transfers aggregated 491,165 shares compared with 465,470 Friday.

Cheerful business items apparently had little influence on buying sentiment, brokers said. The main impediments still were war fears, tax doubts, concern over possible expansion of Governmental industrial controls and nervousness regarding the British-aid battle in Congress.

Steels, up for a while, dipped when a slight decrease was estimated in the current week's mill operations, the first this year. The slip, however, was due practically to shut-downs for the purpose of making necessary repairs. U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Youngstown Sheet shares conceded minor amounts.

General Motors was off ½ at 42½, although directors, after the conclusion of trading on the exchange, voted a dividend of 75 cents a share on the common, the same as paid in the first quarter of 1940. Chrysler was unchanged.

Announcement of complete liquidation of more British-owned American stocks was moderately helpful but talk was heard of persistent selling on the "big board" by other foreign nations which anticipate their assets in this country may be "frozen" sooner or late, and are turning securities into cash for transfer elsewhere.

Among weak spots were American Telephone, Dow Chemical, Philip Morris, American Locomotive preferred, and Westinghouse. Losses running to a point or so were recorded for Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, DuPont, Chesapeake & Ohio, Bath Iron Works, and Coca Cola.

Up a shade were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Anaconda, and Standard Oil of N. J.

Foreign dollar bonds advanced but corporation loans were lower generally. Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was off ¼ to ⅜ of a cent a bushel and corn unchanged to down ¼. Cotton was 5 cents a bale higher to off 15 cents.

Trends were spotty in the Curb. Plus signs were tacked on American Cyanamid "B", Creole Petroleum, Todd Shipyards, and American Gas. In arrears were Bell Aricraft, Cities Service, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, and around 87,000 shares versus 86,000 in the preceding full session.

and South run home with three no trump for game and rubber when they could have defeated the bid for four tricks.

East put too much cerebration into his play, first working a Deschapelles coup to lock out declarer from the dummy instead of immediately returning his partner's suit and later holding up his ace until declarer had won enough tricks to abandon the suit and skip home with the contract.

Here is the way C C tells the sad but amusing story:

"As a kibitzer at a recent rubber-bridge game I got so much 'kick out of watching the play of the accompaning hand that I jotted down the cards. Possibly you can draw some useful lesson from the story, although it appears to me to be just a case of har.. luck.

"West led his fourth-best club; East won and to prevent the run of the heart suit led the diamond king. Dummy took and led the heart king, which East passed, and then the heart queen, which after much thought East also passed. The small diamond was then played, and South ran his four good diamonds, West discarding dow to his three spades and the king, jack of clubs.

"The spade ace came next, and West, hoping East had the jack, played the queen. South then led the spade ten, which West passed. He was put in with the spade king, jack of clubs.

"North and South took ten tricks for game with an extra trick, and rubber; whereas, if East had led back the club, North and South would have been set three or four."

The 14-year-old miner's daughter from West Virginia who, without any effort at all, managed to take the spotlight and the headlines away from all the celebrities who visited Washington during the President's Birthday Ball period, is to get some more of the same tonight when she's a featured guest on "We The People" which will be heard over WJSV at 9.

She is Anna Sklepovich, of Gary, W. Va., who naively wrote to the President informing him that her birthday was the same as his. When the form letter of acknowledgment from the White House arrived back in Gary, it was opened by Anna's brother, no mean practical joker.

But the joke was on the brother because when Anna arrived at the White House and explained the thing, she was given a warm welcome there. She met the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Former Commissioner George Allen, cochairman of the Birthday Ball Committee, saw to it that she got a new evening gown and that she attended all the birthday balls along with all the movie stars. In a sort of radio scoop for WJSV, Anna appeared on Elinor Lee's program Wednesday afternoon to tell of her Cinderella experiences. And now tonight she'll tell the Nation over C. B. S.

Another "We The People" guest, of Washington note, who's gained Nation-wide fame in another way, is to be Mrs. Rose McMullin, the blood donor who has saved more than 30 lives with her gifts of rare blood.

New Airport Opens April 15, Engineer Says

The new National Airport at Gravelly Point will be in "full operation" around April 15, it was announced yesterday by H. H. Houck, resident engineer, at a meeting of the Washington Building Congress at the Mayflower Hotel.

The ltramodern terminal building, runways, and one of the six hangars will be completed by that time, Houck said. The field is now available for emergency use and three landings already have been made by commercial planes, he added.

Howard Cheney, Chicago architect and consultant on the Gravelly Point project, told the builders that a change in design for at least one hangar has been necessitated by Army plans to build a "super flying fortress"—a plane to be known as the B-19 with a wingspread of 212 feet and a tail height of 42 feet.

To accommodate future ships of this type, Cheney said, one hangar will be constructed with a door opening 223 feet wide and 45 feet high. The other five hangars will be built to house ships currently in general use and will be 176 feet wide. One of these will be ready for the airport opening and the others will be completed by next fall, he said.

Cheney and Commissioner W. E. Reynolds of the Public Buildings Administration, Federal Works Agency, told of progress at the new flying field, predicting that upon completion it will be the "greatest airport in the world from all aspects."

It was estimated that a total of $14,000,000 would be expended before the entire project is actually finished. This figure was compared with $40,000,000 which Germany spent on its "national" airport in Berlin.

Because of numerous designing faults, the Berlin field has become a "white elephant," Reynolds declared. Exhaustive studies of all famous airports in the world were made before a "master plan" for Gravelly Point was finally adopted, he explained.

"Faults which were found in these other fields have, as far as possible, been eliminated from our Gravelly Point plans," Reynolds said.

All runways were laid out at the new airport to conform with wind variations, Reynolds told the meeting. Both Army and commercial fliers went aloft before the runways were planned to study wind directions over the site, he added.

The main, 6,800-foot runway—longest in the world—runs approximately north and south in the direction of prevailing winds and will be the most generally used.

"The entire project was plotted with an eye to the future," Reynolds said, "and ample space is available for any necessary expansion."

Describing the "streamlined" terminal building, Cheney said it will be fronted with a 200-foot window—only 17 feet short of the length of Union Station waiting room. A public observation ramp will circle the structure and passengers will be separated from sightseers, he said.

There also will be a "limited number" of rooms available to passengers for clothing changes or overnight accommodations. A cafe and dining terrace will seat 600 persons.

6 Woolly Scions of Siberian Refugee Mother Need Reindeer to Uphold Family Tradition

SIX IN A ROW—THEY'RE RARE, YOU'LL KNOW—Six pedigreed Samoyeds pups belonging to Mrs. John H. Thomas, Mount Rainier, Md. Samoyeds, a breed of dog rare to this country, are trained to herd reindeer in Siberia. It is unlikely, however, that these pups, 7 weeks old yesterday, will be able to pursue the family occupation when they grow up

Six scions of a Siberian refugee mother who reached this country via China attained the age of seven weeks yesterday at the home of Mrs. John H. Thomas, 4210 Thirty-second Street, Mount Rainier. As yet they are unnamed.

When they grow up, it is unlikely that they will be able to pursue the traditional family occupation of generations, tending herds of reindeer.

The six pups are offspring of Farningham Snow Wrangle, a pedigreed Samoyede, which was given to Mrs. Thomas by Miss Hazel Shadell, a missionary to China, who is now living in Takoma Park.

Samoyeds are a rare breed of dog in this country. They were originally trained for use as reindeer herd dogs in Siberia, Mrs. Thomas says, and received the name from the tribe which developed them.

In appearance Samoyeds resemble a collie. Their coloring is always either white or cream or a mixture of the two.

Wrangle was raised in the Farningham Kennels in England by Miss I. Kilbourne Scott and was taken to China by Miss Shadell. She raised one litter in China.

Mrs. Thomas has a pedigree for Wrangle which goes back six generations. All the dogs listed on the family tree were first prize winners and many of them were champions, the pedigree attests.

Coffee Pact Is Ratified By Senate

By the Associated Press

The Senate ratified yesterday a treaty by which 14 Latin-American nations agree to apportion among themselves their exports of coffee to the United States market. The total to be apportioned amounts to 15,900,000 bags yearly.

The effect of the treaty, sponsors said, would be to prevent glutting the market and force down the price of a commodity upon which many of the countries involved depend largely for foreign exchange which which to buy here.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said stability of many of these Latin-American governments was largely dependent on the stability of their nation's economic structure.

Nations signing the treaty, in addition to the United States, are Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru and Venezuela.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, told the Senate that while he was not opposing the treaty, he believed the country should know that "the immediate and direct result of the agreement is to raise the price of coffee $25,000,000 in the United States."

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, asserted the agreement would not raise the price above its "normal level" before the market became "demoralized."

Jealousy Caused Her to Lose Job, Mrs. Jessel Says

Chicago, Feb. 3 (INS).—Jealousy was behind her ouster as an entertainer from a Boston night club, Lois Andrew Jessel, 16, wife of George Jessel, insisted today.

She lost her job because she was too young under the law to work in a place where liquor is served. She said:

"I was such a hit that I drew all the business away from the biggest rival of the place where I was appearing. The manager of the other place squawked to the Labor Board and the newspapers dug up my birth certificate, showing I will be 17 on March 24."

She denied she and Jessel contemplated divorce, attributing such talk also to "jealusy."

Bill Would Send More D. C. Boys To Academies

Bills to give the District 15 appointees to the Naval Academy, instead of the present 5, and 9 appointees to the Military Academy, instead of 5, were introduced yesterday by Chairman Reynolds of the Senate District Committee upon his return to the Capitol from Naval Hospital.

In other District legislative developments, the Commissioners approved two bills and reported disapproval on one. They favored Representative Randolph's bill to amend the child labor law to permit performance of child actors of 14 years or older and another measure to give the Minimum Wage Board authority in enforcing the women's eight-hour law.

They reported unfavorably on a bill to give the Secretary of War authority to take over gas storage tanks in event of invasion, citing an article in the Times of London to the effect that the tanks do not constitute a hazard.

Chief Justice Lauds McReynolds At Court Opening

Chief Justice Hughes, at the opening of the Supreme Court yesterday, paid tribute to Associate Justice James C. McReynolds, who retired Saturday. He said:

"On February 1, 1941, Mr. Justice James Clark McReynolds retired from active service as associate justice of this court. Forthright, independent, maintaining with strength and tenacity of conviction his conceptions of constitutional right, he has served with distinction upon this bench for upward of 26 years and has left a deep impress upon the jurisprudence of the court. It is hoped that, relieved of the burden of active service, he will long enjoy his accustomed vigor of body and mind."

President Roosevelt has indicated that the vacancy will not be filled for some time. Well-informed sources consider Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, a likely appointee. Attorney General Jackson also has been prominently mentioned.

Junk Dealer, 5 Men Held in Safe, House Robberies

A 60-year-old junk dealer and five colored men were held for questioning last night as police believed they were on the verge of solving recent safecracking and housebreaking cases.

The junk dealer is suspected of being involved with the colored men in connection with two weekend safe robberies which netted burglars more than $500.

Detectives said the suspect offered several alibis but had failed to explain possession of a large sum of money found in his pockets.

Police late yesterday also found a bottle in possession of one of the colored men, which they believe contains nitroglycerin such as used in the robbery early Sunday morning of Hogate's Restaurant, 831 Maine Avenue Southwest, where $350 was obtained.

The second safe job over the weekend was reported yesterday at the Cornell Cafeteria, 1414 H Street Northwest, where $169 was taken.

'Big Three' Named As Iron Guard Revolt Leaders

Bucharest, Feb. 3 (AP).—Gen. Ion Antonescu's government issued a communique tonight naming as the "big three" of the recent Iron Guard rebellion Horia Sima, vice premier and Iron Guard Party head; Gen George Petrovicescu, former minister of the interior, and Director of Gendarmes Chica.

Sima still is sought. The other two are under arrest. Severe punishment was ordered for any priests found to have been involved in the rebellion.

The government was reported considering the creation of a Rumanian "Devil's Island" on an uninhabited Black Sea rock to house Iron Guard revolutionists.

Bank Assessments Lifted by Court

About 20 stockholders of the closed Prudential Bank were relieved of stock assessments totaling $100,000 by a decision of the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday.

The court found the bank had been closed more than three years on April 30, 1936, when Receiver John F. Moran called on the stockholders to pay the assessment. The court found that law required the demand to be made within three years.

Because the bank was organized as an Arizona corporation, the justices here were obliged to decide the matter according to the laws of that State instead of local statutes.

Carolyn Lee Tells 'Surprise'—Roses From First Lady

Armed with a bouquet of pink roses nearly as large as herself, 5-year-old Movie Actress Carolyn Lee, who has been ill with acute bronchitis, yesterday was up for 15 minutes to tell people in the hospital just who had sent those flowers.

They came from Mrs. Roosevelt and were the "surprise" Carolyn requested Sunday. Carolyn was tickled pink. She put the two accompanying cards—one with a picture of the White House, the other Mrs. Roosevelt's personal card—in her scrapbook.

Mrs. Warren Copp, Carolyn's mother, who is staying close by Children's Hospital, said yesterday that she hoped Carolyn would be out "within a few days."

Mrs. Copp intends taking Carolyn immediately to Miami, Fla., for a touch of sunshine. Mrs. Roosevelt paid a surprise visit to Carolyn Sunday and promised to send her a present. The flowers came quickly.

800 to Report On Symphony Drive Today

Eight hundred volunteer solicitors will lunch at the Carlton today at 12:30 and hear the results of the first day's drive for $107,600 to maintain the National Symphony Orchestra's eleventh season.

Honor guests will be the 11 subcommittee chairmen of the campaign. Attention today will be spotlighted on the special gifts committee which has already collected a sizable sum in precampaign work. The drive is continued for nine days.

Meanwhile, Conductor Hans Kindler and the orchestra will be in New York preparing for their metropolitan New York debut at Carnegie Hall tonight at 8:40.

Many of those attending the luncheon will leave immediately afterward for the orchestra's New York concert. They include Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. King and Mrs. Truxtun Beale.

Distillers Lose Tax-Refund Tilt

Distillers' efforts to recover $1,000,000 in AAA processing taxes from the Secretaries of Treasury and Agriculture were blocked by the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday.

The Stitzel-Weller Distillery contneded that the industry was entitled to recover taxes paid under the AAA Act because the act, and its taxes, were declared invalid by the Supreme Court. For six years the money has been earmarked in the Treasury, by order of the Comptroller General.

The appeal court said it "might well be true" that the distillers were entitled to get their money back, but that their relief must come from Congress and not from the courts.

Robbers Get $50 At Westchester

Two young men, one with a revolver, held up the receptionist in Building A of the fashionable Westchester Apartments last night and escaped with $50 in cash and an undetermined number of checks from the cash box.

Mrs. Cornelia M. Pearson of 3620 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, turned over the money to them when confronted with the gun. The holdup occurred in the Westchester building nearest Thirty-ninth Street and Cathedral Avenue Northwest.
